Gay lingerie for males is on display, and there is no great rush for same, and as a result are a drug on the market. The surplus will probably be converted into full neckties. What is needed is some peek-a-boo points, so the world could catch a fleeting glimpse.

Most of them are such a violent clash of colors that even G. Washington Maddox would not be caught in them, even if it were permissible, and good form to wear them as an outer garment.

Miss Peggy Joyce, who has had more millionaires because than she knows what to do with, will be wedded for the fifth time. Lord David Northwick being the victim. A wide circle of acquaintances extend best wishes to Dave.

Among the recent convulsions of hysterics of the major political parties, the Baltimore Sun spiritually notes:
But at Kansas City, last month, the bonze flowed so copiously that some of the leading drags were soamed the whole of the nation. At Houston there was such open and wholesale trafficking in the forbidden stuff that the local papers printed the market quotations daily, and protested bitterly when the bootleggers hid them.

The prohibition party assembled in convention day before yesterday, and the early returns indicate the delegates all remained sober, until adjournment. They indulged in an inspiring conghouse over religious toleration. It was further proposed that in the social war on the human he added. This was a bright and noble idea, to which the scofflaws will demur, on the grounds that some decline in violators on the highways and byways should be shown, ere the face curtains are torn, and the kitchen stove kicked over, in the interests of law-and-order.

The cheering information has been showered on a waiting world, that General Nobile's dog came out of the pitiless Arctic, without getting his tail frosted.

WILL TRADE 1928 Pontiac for sedan for equity in small house. Phone 866. — (Klamath Falls Herald.) A sign of winter.

Some more bikers down the highway, can testify that an auto, like a locomotive, will not turn out to avoid a mishap.

An impudent and unthinking father yesterday told his 16-year-old prospective movie queen to do it herself, when ordered to do home and advise Mother she would probably see her again next Tuesday.

One of the paved streets has turned out to be a skating rink. It was intended to be a replica of the Indianapolis speedway.

Owing to the heat, Lady Ford-Coupe of the local imitation British set, has discarded the young Anvils suspended for the last six months from the tendril of her ear.

THE world has probably never seen a finer exhibition of courage and unselfish devotion to a humanitarian cause than has been exhibited the past month by the hardy aviators of Sweden, Norway, Poland and Russia, in their unceasing efforts to rescue the victims of the Nobile disaster.

Premier Mussolini has extended the heartfelt gratitude of his countrymen to these gallant aviators, who have daily risked their lives to save the citizens of another land. Such a tribute was certainly richly deserved. Nor can one blame the news paper men of Copenhagen for wondering why, in this epoch-making crusade, there were so few representatives of the air force of General Nobile's own countrymen. Perhaps the distance from Kings Bay supplies the answer.

And how richly rewarded these aviators and seamen have been. Only a week ago, the outside world was willing to accept the fact that Nobile would be the only survivor of this ill-fated expedition. Today, with the exception of the six men carried off by the dirigible, every member of the Italia party has been accounted for, and all but two alive. To date, ten men have literally been snatched from the jaws of death. What a triumph for that heroism which refuses to count the cost, and knows no such word as "fail."

TWELVE GOOD MEN AND TRUE
THE case of George Remus, "bootleg king" of Cincinnati, presents a neat travesty on American justice. Such an occurrence might be expected in a book of satire, and in fiction it would be amusing. In real life, it is not so pleasant.

Last October Remus corrected the faults of his wife by the simple expedient of killing her. He was forthwith placed under arrest and tried for murder before a jury in an Ohio court.

Pleading that he committed the crime in a fit of insanity, but asserting that he had since regained his reason, Remus conducted his own defense in a way designed to baffle honest jurymen. After due deliberation the jury found him not guilty on the ground that he was insane, and Remus was therefore committed not to prison, but to the state hospital at Lima.

There he remained until one of his minions persuaded the Ohio Court of Appeals that he was not insane, but as reasonable as any upright citizen who occasionally indulged in a fit of temper. From the state's attorney's office came a protest appealing this new decision, and Remus remained at Lima. The Supreme Court of Ohio denied him bail.

But on June 20 the same court decided by a vote of four to three that he was sane and technically entitled to his release. Remus is now celebrating in Cincinnati, and the state is planning to pursue the case no farther.

"Old Father Antie," the Law," has done his best, but his best in this case resulted in no great good to the community. It was a jury which started the parade to freedom, and upon the jury system has been placed the opprobrium for the whole transaction. And there, perhaps, it belongs. The fact that twelve good men and true are frequently twelve good, pliable waxen images is becoming all too evident. Juries are an indispensable safeguard in criminal trials, but some process of selection may soon be necessary to improve the quality of their membership. —Independent.

QUILL POINTS

Some sections grow more prosperous, and some put their faith in politicians who claim to be the poor man's friend.

Ameriennism: Teaching little boys it is ugly to fight; teaching them to believe our fighters were great men.

Mr. Hoover thought he had a big job in Belgium, but just wait until he hears the pathetic cries of the great American job-hunter.

A man never becomes a success by making a hobby of standing up for his rights. Look at the pedestrian. He has the right-of-way.

A common sorrow or hardship binds people closer together, and maybe that explains why divorce is more common now.

Science says there is unlimited energy in an atom. And it does look that way when you see him on a shopping tour, carrying packages for his wife.

Liquor may continue to be a political issue, but in the course of time it may be necessary for the candidates to explain what it is.

Correct this sentence: "I don't hesitate to accept checks," said the filling station man, "and I have yet to get a bogus one."

LITTLE CHUNKS OF GOLD LOGIC

You Know I Think We Understand.

A correspondent writes: "I have been reading your staff for years and am sure you are what you claim to be regular doctors. You are fighting a hard battle and should have a regular liver man's co-operation. I have worked in lumber camps for many seasons in every capacity. I'm a common lumber jack to foreman and prospector. You are a lumber jack would work in the woods all winter and in spring, as soon as the ice was out of the river or stream where the logs were jammed, you would go on the drive, which means treating the logs down stream to the lumber mill.

When driving logs it is often necessary to be in the cold water, waist-deep almost continually from early morning till late at night, when we would have to walk back to camp several miles in our wet clothes, eat supper and get into our beds with little wet clothes on. These clothes were fairly dry by morning. Next day a portion of the same performance, and perhaps for weeks at a time.

"When in the morning we would find ice in the water but would jump in and go to work. Sometimes we got so numb from the cold that we would have to get out to the bank and run up and down for a while to get warm. It was hardly and expensive. Many times we would feel sore and tired, but there never was as much 'cold' or rheumatism among us as there usually is in an office force of the same number of people.

"I am now 62 years old and do not mind getting my feet wet or anything like that. I know a man that has been cold for 20 years and has had frost-bite on his feet. But no sickness, I believe anyone who can encounter the same exposure and not suffer any ill-effects from it. Yours respectfully, E. B. B.

Another writer writes to remark: "You all in a comfortable office, you are not in your right mind and can't do any real work. I have had some of your kind of people in my office and they are not doing any work. You are all in a comfortable office, you are not in your right mind and can't do any real work. I have had some of your kind of people in my office and they are not doing any work.

Communications
Why Hoover?—and Here's How?
In an editorial appearing in your columns of the 13th instant you say that those who seem equipped by intelligent qualifications who intend to vote for Governor Smith, I am one of them.

You say that these supposedly intelligent republicans intend to vote for Hoover. Now I am not going to desert Hoover, because I never failed under his banner. When did Mr. Hoover become a republican? In 1918, soon after his return from a long residence in Europe, he attached himself to the Woodrow Wilson administration, and in the congressional elections of that year Mr. Hoover made the following statement: "My own views are summarized in a word: That we must have united support for the president. I am for President Wilson's leadership, not only in the conduct of the war, but also in the negotiation of peace, and afterwards in the direction of America's destiny in the consolidation of the world." At that time such republicans as ex-President Roosevelt, ex-President Taft, Mr. Harding, and all the leading republicans opposed the position taken by Mr. Hoover. In 1928 the name of Herbert Hoover was on the democratic ballot in several states, including Vermont and Michigan, where the following names also appeared: William Gilbreth, A. Mitchell Palmer, William Jennings Bryan, and Edward L. Edwards.

While he expects at this time to be a republican, his record tells his story. He was born in 1874. He was living in California during the campaign of 1896 when Bryan led the hosts of democracy. The issue was "social money" and protection for the farmer, having equipped for the battle of life in the public schools of America, in that decisive contest lacked the interest and the patriotism to even cast his first vote. At the age of 23 he left the United States and never returned to vote until 1918, when he was 45 years of age.

What public expression has he ever made which would lead one to believe that he is a statesman? How to understand the fact? If so he has never given the country any benefit of his knowledge on that important subject. But you say, he is a great engineer. Well, the schools are turning out hundreds of engineers every year. Some of them, like McAdams, Corbitt, and others, have left foot-prints on the sands of time in the line of their chosen profession. Has Mr. Hoover ever engineered and constructed a Panama canal, a Suez canal, the underground railway system of a great city, or any of our great bridges? Where, and in what way has he displayed any genius as an engineer? Yes, he was sent out by English capitalists to view mines in China, Australia, Africa, and elsewhere, and in the short space of twenty-two years he accumulated a fortune of ten million dollars. He certainly is a money-maker.

But you say that he is a great administrator, that he led starving Belgium during the war. It seems to me that the people of the United States feel that country, and that it did not require superior ability to distribute the food among these starving people. Belgium is one of the small countries of Europe and I cannot see why Mr. Hoover should be lauded in this respect, as hundreds of men could have done equally as well.

You say that he is a man with a wide vision and that he has great knowledge of international affairs. I only remember that in this respect he disagreed with all the leading republicans of the United States in regard to the settlement of the world war and the matter

(By Walt Mason.)
THE EASY WAY

You save much trouble by forgetting the dinner table, then (if you're making) you dodge a lot of useless fretting by shooting such things from your mind. A fella beat me last November, said he was that I would not get it, and I remarked, "I won't remember what this man Jimenson has done. I might go forth with my attorney and camp upon his crooked trail, and follow him wherever he'll journey, and threaten him with law and jail. I might denounce his tricks as rotten. Where all the gadding world might hear, but all such things are less forgotten, for life is short and peace is dear." I met that Jimenson one morning just after he had stung me this: I altered my will words of warning, I didn't speak about the law. The sweat was rolling down his features, he thought I'd surely climb his form, he clasped me with malicious convulsions who rant and swear when they get away. But I dislodged the teeth of Lindy, and landed him a good chair, and didn't kick in my shins, and never spoke about the law. I could see how much he hated the story, shabby trick he'd played, if I had jawed him and scolded, he would have laughed, all undisturbed. And ever since I've found him trying to square things for that trick account; he's wanted to hand out large bougie another way I see him first, I have no doubt I'd get a Lizzie well worth whatever I paid for conscience has with him been busy, since I figured that other trade. I've never thought it wise to quarrel, when some small mishap I have met, to hand out large bougie green or small, when it is easy to forget. If some small talk comes and beats me, I smile upon him just the same, and after that I find he treats me like one who has a sense of shame.

Pool Company. These concerns do a business of $100,000,000 a year, which proves that we are as clean as we are rich.

This nation still has money to lend. In six months Europe has borrowed one billion, fifty-three million from us, and there is plenty more where that came from.

The United States has an income of one hundred billion a year, ten millions more than it costs just to live. So we lend.

Some day we shall wish we had invested our billions nearer home. One cheerful figure in our national business is our trade of almost two thousand million dollars with Latin America.

Before the war our South American trade was only $250,000,000, and we have more than a billion invested in South America, against $100,000,000 in 1914.

Italy, in memory of her victory over Austria, unveils a monument, which originally bore this inscription: "From this point we have driven the barbarian language, laws and arts."

Mussolini has changed "barbarian" to "foreign," but still Austria is offended.

For three thousand years "barbarian" has been a word of deep insult along the Mediterranean. Everybody outside of Greece was a barbarian to the Greeks, of whom none could legally marry an outside woman. That caused all of Jason's trouble, after he brought back his high-strung barbarian wife, who had helped him get what he wanted. For details that would make even Mussolini shudder, see Euripides.

HAY HARVESTING ON FULL BLAST IN REESE CREEK

REESE CREEK, July 12.—Warm weather has come to hand, and the hayning season is on in full force. Most everyone is cutting their second crop. Hay is good this year.

Fern Jack was home visiting for a week, but has gone back to work again. Mrs. Jack was not well last week, had to be in bed part of the time, but is better at present.

The Fourth was spent in a quiet way by most of the people in this vicinity. Some were down at the river where they could fish and swim or just rest and eat.

The Robertson family, with a few friends, spent the Fourth on the river near Paul's.

Frank Gaster and family, Mrs. W. E. Hammel, Mrs. Manty Courtney and Miss Minter took a trip to Alturas for a few days last week. The trip got a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Watkins were in the Klamath country for several days last week.

It was quite cold the first of the week and the mosquitoes were bad. Rogue River has the best climate.

Mr. Sullivan, wife and four sons of Bond, Ore., visited over the week end with Mr. Cummins and family. Mrs. Sullivan is a sister of Mr. Cummins. They attended Sunday school Sunday.

Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Dinby of Central Point visited at the Vestal home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb of Derby filed at the Humphrey home Sunday.

Tom Semple of Medford has a brother, just recently from Scotland, who came from Canada. They all visited at Tom Semple's Sunday. There were 67 at Sunday school last Sunday. Be true faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:10.

More Deaths Surrender
WASHINGTON, July 14.—The navy department was notified today that 31 native Nicaraguans surrendered within the past week at Ocotul and Somoto, making a total of 217 since July 7.
