ROTARIANS TOLD HOOVER A VERY LIKEABLE MAN

Moving pictures taken by Horace Bromley, Medford's camera kid, during the recent visit of Herbert Hoover to the Rogue River valley were shown for the first time at the noon luncheon meeting of the Rotarians today at the Hotel Medford.

Intimate personal glimpses of the genial republican nominee, apparently enjoying himself immensely at Bill Isaacs' Elg Hotel lodge on the Rogue, were included. Scenes after scenes, taken from every angle and showing the noted visitor in serious and jovial moods, were included. Local men and women who assisted in serving breakfast and dinner to the group were also shot by the tireless Mr. Bromley.

Incidental to the showing of the reels, impressions of Mr. Hoover were given by Carl Swigort, one of the official hosts, and Bill Isaacs, both of whom agreed that he was a very likeable man. They described him as serious minded and reluctant to commit himself on many subjects. It was denied that he was inconsiderate in dealing with camera men and newspaper reporters, who followed doggedly at his heels during his short visit in the valley. An interesting fact brought out in the pictures was that the presidential nominee refused to pose with any of the fish caught by members of the party, declaring that to him fishing had its ethics and that he would not take credit for anything he didn't deserve.

In addition to pictures of the Hoover party views of the planes in the international air tour were also shown. It had been planned to show the finish of the recent Indian marathon which ended at Grants Pass, but lack of time interfered.

A brief report on the financial success of the American Legion convention was submitted by Mr. Bromley, who stated that the merchants will not be called upon to contribute any of the money originally subscribed in view of the fact that most of the men on the commission showed Scotch tendencies in handling the celebration. Total receipts are more than $10,000, he estimated.

Today's program was arranged by Clyde Eakin, and next week doctors and all members of the healing force of Medford will be in charge of the entertainment.

Visitors at the luncheon today included the following: J. C. Lander, Buena Vista, Cal.; Gene Harrison, San Bernardino, Cal.; Dr. A. A. Ross, Lockhart, Texas; William Stoddard, Everett, Wash.; Bill Isaacs and Earl Coe of Medford. Women who assisted in entertaining the Hoover party and were present to see the pictures included Mrs. Ted Baker, Mrs. Earl Coe, Miss Frances Kinney and Mrs. Al Hayden.

LOCAL SCENERY MUCH IMPROVED BY ELIJAH HURD

One of the greatest recent single improvements in Medford is that Attorney E. H. Hurd no longer wears a mustache, and hence no longer can it be said in way of explanation, whenever he changes his politics, that he is talking thru his whiskers. His disguise is now so perfect that this democrat of many years here, who last January became a republican, can now amble the streets boasting Hoover, without fear of a comeback.

The absence of the mustache of 40 years growth has so changed the facial architecture of Mr. Hurd that last week he was mistaken several times for one of the gassed Legion veterans. His only explanation of why he parted with the hirsute adornment is that the last heat wave, week before last, was too much for him, and that besides mustaches are all out of date, a nuisance and a thing of the past. Hence, last week during the convention he shaved it off.

His wife had never seen him without a mustache, nor had any member of his immediate family or any person in Medford, until the amputation of last week.

Time was when Elijah also wore with the mustache a full set of whiskers of the Charles Evans Hughes type, but after his face thus adorned had caused a couple of runaways in those days of horses, and on top of this his own children mistook him for Hughes, he parted in 1905, back in Kansas, with the whiskers, through which the middlewest cyclones were wont to sport.

CHANGE FOR JOB AT U. S. WEATHER BUREAU HERE.

Clarence A. Cole, relief man with the United States weather bureau, is in the city to serve during vacation time in the Medford weather office. Dwight Randall, assistant to L. Walter Dick, meteorologist in charge of the local office, will begin his vacation tomorrow to last until August 14th, when Mr. Cole will enjoy his vacation until September 5. Mr. Cole came here from Bozeman where he had relieved the weather bureau man there while he was on vacation.

Incidentally, Dwight Randall, who has been generally recognized by his superiors as one of the most promising young men in the United States weather service, has tendered his resignation to become effective September 4th because of his intention of completing his education at college.

Therefore, to fill the vacancy of junior observer, caused by this resignation, all young men between the ages of 16 and 20 years who are interested in a career in the United States weather service, are invited to call on Mr. Dick, the local meteorologist, at the weather bureau office in the Liberty building, and talk the matter over with him. All applicants must have had at least a grammar school education, and preferably a high school education, and should have a love for mathematics and science.

The United States weather service offers exceptional opportunities now because of the airways service which it has in charge and the great strides made in airplane and airways development.

SCIENCE MONITOR GIVES SANE VIEW OF HOOVER VISIT

"The Christian Science Monitor" of July 31, describes the fishing trip of Herbert Hoover to this valley without mentioning fish, the "kidnaping," or pestiferous photographers, so thoroughly discussed by the correspondents of New York papers.

The trip from Grants Pass to this city, is described as follows: "To the pleasure of a smart and folding lofty Mt. Pitt the party assembled at Grants Pass and on a fine macadam road proceeded from that beautiful little community to this charming city. We wound up the day in scenic splendor."

This is in sharp contrast to the other accounts, which maintained that at Grants Pass, the nominee was "lured" down the macadam road to be "kidnaped" when Torgery Bill diabolically and diagonally placed his auto across the Hoover path.

The column length article stresses Mr. Hoover's love of nature and tells of his knowledge and love of the mountains and the trees. The article concludes: "Here was a presidential candidate, a man of international reputation, whose presence and activities were important news in his quiet and simple way getting out among the hills and forests that he knows and loves and getting from their beauty and peace the serenity and surcease that he felt the need of."
