

ENTHUSIASM IS LIKE THAT AT FOOTBALL TILT

Nearly 100,000 Enthusiastic Men and Women Cheer Hoover in Stanford Bowl—Traffic Jam Like the Big Game—Scores Come By Airplane.

(By James L. West, Associated Press Staff Writer)

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 11.—(AP)—California's by the thousands converged today upon this spot of learning to celebrate a great political event in the state's history—the formal notification of Herbert Hoover that the republican party has selected him as its candidate for president.

By airplane, by motor and by train they came to rub shoulders with the great and near great of the party who had traveled thousands of miles to bring the message of nomination to the engineer and administrator who began his life's career here 27 years ago as one of Stanford's first students.

Hours before the gates of the huge athletic bowl were thrown open at noon, the east portion of the building campus was covered with automobiles, while the hills of Palo Alto, resident in its holiday dress, was overrun.

A special detail of 1980 university summer students assisted municipal and state police in untangling traffic jams and diverting cars to the immense parking place set aside beneath the towering structure facing to the westward of the stadium.

Airplanes which thundered down from the skies to the newly-created landing field west of Palo Alto added their noise to the motors and the shouts of the crowds which were as enthusiastic as any that have gathered for the great football games at Stanford.

Hundreds made the journey here from north, south and east by airplane, the favorite mode of travel for business men and sportsmen of the Pacific coast. Among those arriving by this route were Mrs. Van Ness Leavitt of Los Angeles, sister of the nominee; Mrs. G. P. Clark, national committee woman for California, and a number of political leaders from the southern section of the state.

Special trains over the Southern Pacific line arrived every 10 minutes from San Francisco and the north and from cities to the southward as far as Los Angeles and Santa Barbara. But the bulk of the crowd, it appeared, chose the automobile as the mode of transportation. A incoming roads were jammed, many of the machines having been on the way since even before dawn.

While the crowds were gathering in and around the stadium, the nominee himself remained quietly at his home. He appeared to be in the best of health and spirits and laughingly related to relatives and guests some of the shafts which went his way during the birthday dinner, given him last night by the newspaper correspondents who accompanied him here from the east last month.

Hoover proudly displayed a $2.25 watch, one of half a dozen "gifts" from the newspaper men, which he decided to carry to the nomination ceremonies. Although he has received many fine watches as gifts at home and abroad, Hoover uses only a watch of the $2.25 variety. The last one of that kind he had was rapidly wearing out.

During the forenoon Hoover denied himself to all callers and spent the morning with Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the republican national committee, and Associate Justice Harland F. Stone, who are guests at his home.

JERRY BIRD SOME DOG, EVEN IF HE WEARS GLASSES

Jerry Bird looks at the world through green goggles these days. He was interviewed yesterday as he sat in his Essex sedan, and except for two jaws and the jaunty angle at which he held his shaggy head, appeared pleased at the idea of publicity.

Seven years ago Jerry, then only a five weeks' old Alredale pup, was bought by Mrs. Lydia King, county health nurse, who has been his closest friend and constant companion ever since. Jerry was born near the Gulf of Mexico and is the son of aristocratic parents.

Every time that Mrs. King is pulled out into the country the dog goes along. Sitting at his mistress's side, head slightly bent to the open window, in order that nothing of interest will escape, Jerry sees everything. Much traveling in wind and dust was hard on his eyes. A veterinarian prescribed glasses and glasses he got. Even at first Jerry took the matter calmly and wore the glasses with the air of a school marionette.

Recently when Mrs. King and Jerry went to Salem on a vacation trip, the dog attracted a great deal of attention. Maintaining a bored expression, while his owner explained to numerous persons why Jerry's eyes were hidden he sat in the car and looked them over in much the same way in which they inspected him, Mrs. King related.

Jerry loves to fight. He never picks a scrap, but he never turns down even a faint invitation to battle. If anyone mentions "schoolmate" when the dog is in the same room, and even when he is apparently sleeping in a remote corner, he jumps up and is ready to eat any variety. Another of his specialties is ice cream, preferably in the cone.

An ordinary Alredale is Jerry. Two blue ribbons won by him in 1922 and 1923 at shows in Boston and Salem, Mass., are carefully preserved by Mrs. King, who apologizes for the un-Alredale appearance of her dog, since she decided to bob his hair not long ago. Jerry's ears droop. A few years ago before he had a serious case of ear trouble, his ears were among his good features for they were always held erect.

Long ago Jerry learned that humans should be protected, especially women and children. During the year 1922 at Boston, Mass., when he was touring the United States with Mrs. King he saved a little girl's life when the jewelry broke and the sled on which she was riding was lost in the water. After this act of bravery an autographed picture of "Laddie Boy," famous dog of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harding, was sent by the former president to Jerry Bird.

The two titles which Jerry knows that he must perform are protecting his mistress and the one in which they ride. When he is left in the car it is never locked, but he is always there when Mrs. King is ready to go. And Jerry loves that word.

BLAME HUSBAND FOR TRAGEDY OF SOCIETY MATRON

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 11.—(AP)—The finger of blame for the tragic end of the chaste little society matron, today stood partly pointed at the separate love of her husband for a man's outdoor sports. One of her close friends, Mrs. Mae Switzer, described the former childless and wealthy woman as lonely from being left to find her own amusement by a husband who spent many of his Sundays at his hobbies of fishing and hunting.

To the district attorney Mrs. Switzer said that, although she had known for nearly five years of Mrs. Mellis' affair with Leo Kelly, she did not believe Frank Mellis was aware of the secret love because he was busy fishing and hunting so much. At the same time, Mrs. Switzer said, relatives of Mellis knew of it, because frequently Kelly accompanied Mrs. Mellis on visits to the latter's mother, and to the wife of Lou Mellis, Frank's brother. Kelly, the family butcher boy who dressed the ducks which Mellis shot on his Sunday hunting trips, is charged with the murder of the sportsman's wife, whom he illicitly loved for five years.

Kelly had told the police that he quarreled with Mrs. Mellis last Sunday over her attending a party the previous Thursday night with Mrs. Switzer, and without himself as escort. The latter woman denied that she happened to know that Mrs. Mellis went to a party that Thursday night with her own husband. The police declared jealousy over that party, and over Mrs. Mellis drinking at it, was the cause of Kelly beating her "terribly" and assertedly fatally, when in a drunken and jealous rage.

CANADIAN LIQUOR WORTH $10,000,000 SEIZED BY POLICE

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 11.—(AP)—Seized liquor stocks valued at $10,000,000 were under guard of provincial police today and 26 exporters were under subpoena to appear in court to answer to charges of violation of the Ontario liquor control act.

The action, it is believed, will close up the source of supply of many of the bootleggers engaged in running liquor into the United States. The warehouses in which the liquor is stored are located across the river from Detroit, Mich. Complaints against the exporters were made by Sir Henry Drayton, head of the liquor control board. He said he hoped the action would serve as a test of that provision of the liquor control act regulating the storing of excessive stocks of liquor in bonded warehouses.

Two of the largest liquor exporters of the province, Harry Low and Sid Nathanson, were among those subpoenaed. Low is head of the Carling Brewery-Erie Transit company and Nathanson head of the Inter-Traffic company, an exporting concern for widespread liquor interests.

It was the second large seizure of liquor in bonded warehouses in recent months. Two months ago the stocks of two other large exporters of Ontario were seized. The case against them is still pending.
