

PEAR PRICES IN EAST IMPROVING, GROWERS REJOICE

Prices on Bartlett pears have taken a sudden step forward after being unusually low the first of the season. One grower and buyer, L. A. Banks, reported today that he received twice as much as he had expected from pears shipped to New York and Chicago and sold this week.

Yesterday Mr. Banks, owner of 478 acres of pears in the Itasca River valley, sold two carloads of Bartlett in New York markets at an average of $3.62 per box. Two cars were sold in New York today at an average price of $2.75. Four carloads have been sold by Mr. Banks in Chicago during the past two days at an average of $2.20 a box.

Ninety carloads will have been shipped since by tonight, says Banks who estimates his total at 110 cars by the end of the Bartlett season, which will probably be next week.

"Because of the sudden rise in prices on Bartletts higher prices on late pears are anticipated," Mr. Banks said today.

NEW COLOR MOVIE DEMONSTRATION IS DECLARED A MARVEL

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 17.—(AP)—A new method of color photography has been demonstrated here by Frederick T. O'Grady, its inventor.

The process does not depend on a combination of two or three beams of colored light but through the seven primary colors directly on the screen. The pictures are made of ordinary commercial film, utilizing only standard lens.

The demonstration was made before a group of scientists and newspaper men. The company backing the new process is called Natural Color Pictures, Inc. As explained by Mr. O'Grady, the color disc attachment revolving in front of the lens behind the lens registers on alternate color exposures. These, projected on the screen at a speed slightly faster than at which ordinary black and white pictures are run, alternate so fast that a single color appears to be present at the same time.

One of the movies showed a man peeling an orange, the color of the fruit, said to be one of the hardest to produce, showing up very realistically. Another picture showed a flag waving in a breeze and there was no overlapping or smearing of colors as frequently happened under the old process.

YALE PROFESSOR OUTLINES A NEW TAXATION IDEA

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Emphasizing the importance of regarding forest taxation as a part of the whole problem of state and local finance, Dr. Fred H. Fairchild of Yale university, outlined the activities of the United States forest taxation inquiry of which he is a director, in an address before the sixth annual conference of the Western Taxpayers' association here today.

"Plans of the inquiry include," he said, "a study of the tax conditions in all of the more important forest regions of the United States. Thus far such study has been nearly completed in the lake states region, covering Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan and has been begun in New England. The principal field study this summer is being concentrated in the states of Oregon and Washington.

"Eventually it is hoped that the report of the forest taxation inquiry may furnish a sound basis of facts and principles, upon which it may be possible for the people and legislatures of the several states to formulate improved methods of taxing the forests, which will not interfere with the most economical exploitation of existing reserves of merchantable timber, nor be an obstacle in the way of reforestation of cut-over lands."

HOOPER ACCLAIMED

(Continued from Page One.) spend two hours inspecting the city and surrounding estates before proceeding to Los Angeles. There, in the early afternoon he will be formally welcomed and will make an address.

A delegation of Santa Barbara officials boarded the special train for the north of the city and were received by the nominee in his private car where breakfast was served.

A large crowd met the party at the station here and there was a special escort of police for the trip through the rebuilt business district and to the old Spanish mission.

Given a Fine Send-off ABOARD HOOPER TRAIN, Aug. 17.—(AP) Flowers and flashlights marked the Hoover leaving-taking from Palo Alto last night, with tiny children the only ones to mount the platform for a last handshake.

With barked chrysanthemums behind her, and a basket of flowers on the rail beside her, Mrs. Hoover stood straight and slender in her mourning black, clasping her hands and smiling at her husband as the crowd applauded, and welcoming the shy children who came bearing gifts.

"Why, what is this?" she said in mock surprise, and "My how sweet," over a basket of wild flowers. "I must take one for Mr. Hoover's buttonhole."

"That is fine, let's shake hands," her husband's deeper voice chimed in as a crudely painted wooden sign, with its six year old donor were pushed upon the platform.

"They painted it themselves, so I'll put it here on the rail where you all can see it," said Mrs. Hoover, drawing the big crowd into the conversation, and lifting to the rail the sign, "Goodbye Hoover, good luck." The children said nothing, half tumbling off the platform in turn, their rows completed.

"But hurry if you want to shake hands with Mr. Hoover," a breathless interrupting voice came from the crowd, where a sudden commotion followed an aproned Slovak mother, pushing her seven year old son before her past somewhat protesting officers, straight to the car steps and right up on the platform.
