Ramblings of a Foot Creeker

MT. HERMON, Calif., Aug. 17.—My last letter left us still at Redwood Park. As we liked the place very much we hope to tell of its accommodations. As we said before, Redwood Park is for all the people and in great numbers there are brick and cement fireplaces scattered over the grounds. Water is had by turning a faucet, and all other necessary conveniences placed all over the camp grounds. So no one has to go any distance to attend to all his wants. A good sewer system is also installed and everything kept sanitary. There is a well supplied store, lunch and soft drinks parlor, postoffice and inn. So all may have about the accommodations they wish to pay for. But the very great majority come and pitch their tents. Tent-ers bring in almost everything but meat and fish. To me personally it was almost an ideal place. And how come in great numbers the true American man and his family, to rest in the great outdoors. And the more people we met the more we felt sure the heart of the working class of America is still sound to the core. And it was not from these families that almost nude women and girls sported awhile in the water and then paraded the rest of the day. But Mr. Carle was anxious to spend a month at Mt. Hermon, so on the last day of July we came down from the park. This time we were able to secure a good camp site and a stove. And while it's a very pleasant place, and we have some most excellent scenery, by distinguished men, personally I like the park better. As we listen to these great men set forth the scriptures, we just feel if all preachers did likewise there would be no such thing as a modernist and fundamentalist. These men do not tell stories and experiences—they do as the Master did—they open to us the scriptures.

We had the great pleasure of meeting Mrs. Isabel Martin of San Jose on Monday and Tuesday. Miss Martin had just returned from Grants, Pass and Rogue River, where a Martin family reunion was held in honor of Rev. David Martin, who has just returned from five years of missionary work in Japan. Miss Martin reported all friends in southern Oregon well and prospering. While very glad to meet her and hear from friends, we did not feel homesick.

Yesterday we spent at Santa Cruz, where a land company wanted to take us for a ride and a lunch. As usual, I who have not the gambling spirit, did not wish to go—but Mr. Carle thought, since they almost wanted to carry us, we better go. So a man and woman got into an automobile taking us about eight miles further south to Rio Del Mar. They told us this was the old Claus Spreckels estate of 4900 acres. But the great house and barn, so they said, had burned some years ago. We were taken to what they called a Polo field, a beautiful level tract of grass land. This tract was supposed to be the race track of the elder Spreckles, where he raced and exercised his blooded stock. We were shown the barn which was a long low stable with box stalls and a saddle covered on one side of it. Plenty of Oregon tar weed was in evidence which made walking exceedingly unpleasant. There were four polo ponies and 13 Shetland ponies. The rider for life to people wishing to take in the hills.

Then on to the Country club, so called for land. The club was a temporary building, built on a clean and comfortable. The lunch consisted of one sandwich macaroni, three small sandwiches and coffee. But we were pushed away to another temporary building to hear a lecture on psychology, said lecturer telling us how we were being robbed by every institution under the sun, but the land companies. After this we were driven around and told how when we bought a lot we were entitled to membership in the Country club and the golf club. Membership in the golf club was worth $1000 to us; and the country club about the same. If we bought a lot the land company was to put in a sea wall two miles long; a boulevard on the sea wall and electric lights; the entire length of the beach; between two and three miles. And further they would fill in with sand a 35-ft. lot, which at high tide would be covered with water, so you could build an apartment house on the sand, said house to reach within 15 feet of the top of the cliff. Each house to be built on a light concrete and a steel roof. And all of this for the small sum of $200. As a further inducement to buy a lady insisted she knew Mr. Carle well in Dublin, Ireland. But he did not seem to take kindly to her remarks, so she passed on to some one else, probably telling them she knew them where David Harman had the ocean. We finally reached Santa Cruz and then home to our camp at Mt. Hermon. But I still smile brimstone. And this morning they told us at the auditorium that a light earthquake shock was felt here at 10:45 p. m.
