EXAMINATIONS FOR OBSERVER WEATHER BUREAU

Due to the resignation of Dwight Randall, minor weather observer at the local weather bureau, civil service examination applications will be received for that position at the office of the district secretary of the district at Seattle, Wash., not later than September 28. The position pays a salary of $1920 a year and vacancies occurring in similar positions at higher or lower salaries will be filled from this examination. The salary runs as high as $1320 a year and promotions may be made to junior observer in meteorology, paying $1410 to $1740 a year and later to positions of assistant observer, observer and senior observer with salaries ranging from $1620 to $2500 a year. The duties of the minor observer are, under immediate supervision, occasionally to take simple meteorological observations, to enter routine meteorological data on record sheets, to type stenils and print same from a mimeograph machine, to assist in displaying and distributing storm warnings, and to perform simple clerical tasks. Applicants must submit to the examiner on the day of the examination their photographs taken within two years, securely pasted in the space provided on the admission cards sent them after their applications are filed. Proofs or group photographs will not be accepted. Photographs will not be returned to applicants.

NEW ROGUE RIVER FISH BILL GIVEN LOCAL ATTENTION

The voter's pamphlet with arguments pro and con, upon the proposed constitutional amendments and measures to be voted upon at the general election November 6, were received today by Jackson county voters, through the mails from Secretary of State Sam A. Koser. There are less measures than usual, totalling but eight. Four of these concern fishing. There is the inevitable income tax bill, a bill for the increase of the gasoline tax, and a bill for a reduction of the auto license fee. The only measure of local nature is the Rogue River fish bill, which is linked to similar measures affecting the Umpqua, Des Chutes and McKenzie rivers. They propose power development restriction.

The argument for the passing of the fish bill is prepared by the Oregon Game Protective association, and holds: The recreational facilities of the state of Oregon are unequalled. Their money value is as yet scarcely guessed at and less appreciated. They constitute by far the greatest single capital asset of the state. Later in the argument, the following somewhat surprising statement is made: To now appropriate our own Rogue river for the primary purpose of obtaining cheap electrical energy. For what? To take into California, for sale in California, and for the development in California of industries there requiring low-cost electrical power. The five high dams planned for Rogue river construction will beyond question ruin for all time the recreational value of this great stream, as well as its commercial fishing, and should never be permitted until required for Oregon industries. The rental paid the state for the use of state-owned waters in power development is ridiculously small, and any potential loss thereof is offset many times over by tourist revenue and returns from the salmon industry.

The argument against the fish bill is prepared by the fish bills of Albany, Corvallis, McMinnville, Eugene, Bend, and Grants Pass, the county courts of Lane, Linn and Benton counties, and the Frank Walton league of Grants Pass. The argument holds that the clause "for any purpose whatsoever" is a "killing blow" to the development of mineral resources, or the future water supply of the cities in the watershed of the rivers affected. It is further held that "the fish of Oregon streams are sufficiently protected."

The argument closes: By the same line of reasoning, we should stop the lumber industry from cutting any more timber than the deer hunters might improve their sport and let a large part of the state revert to an Indian paradise. These bills benefit no one. Even the sportsman must earn a livelihood before he can enjoy his sport. These measures are a "bread and butter" proposition for Oregon, and the safety of the state's agricultural and industrial future demands their defeat.

PLAN TO FORM LOCAL RIFLE TARGET CLUB

Efforts are under way by Harry Rinabarger and Sterling Richmond, two local rifle enthusiasts, to revive interest in target shooting and re-establish a branch of the National Rifle association, which formerly was active in Medford. They report fairly good progress to date in lining up prospective members and also report that if enough members can be procured the rifle range will be located on the old site east of the city. Local men interested in the venture are urged to see Mr. Rinabarger at the city building department or Mr. Richmond at the California Oregon Power company.

LOCAL SCHOOLS TO OPEN AS PLANNED

The Medford public schools will begin this scheduled on September 4 and will not close down for the accommodation of student fruit pickers and packing house workers, according to E. H. Hedrick, city school superintendent. Contracts for teachers all begin with pay on that date, he said, and to keep schools closed for the benefit of the students would mean an outlay of much expense in paying faculty members not on duty.

FURNITURE SALE OPENED TODAY

Swenson & Peebler's furniture store on West Main street was a scene of great activity today when people from all parts of the southern Oregon country and from northern California flocked to the bankrupt sale. At nine o'clock the doors opened and up to present time this afternoon the big store has been literally packed with bargain seekers.

Swenson & Peebler's bankrupt sale is being conducted by L. F. Ferguson, veteran sales manager and former owner of a retail establishment in Ashland. Mr. Ferguson has handled several sales in this section of Oregon as well as numerous merchandising events in California. "Although hundreds of people availed themselves of our bargains today, our great stock has hardly been scratched, so there are plenty of saving opportunities for shoppers tomorrow and Saturday," Mr. Ferguson said at noon today. "Each day new specials will be offered as inducements for daily shopping."
