SMITH MET HOOVER WHEN A TRUCKMAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP)—A truckman and an engineer who once spoke at the same meeting are now rivals and their names are in the papers every day.

"Have you ever met Herbert Hoover?" Governor Smith was asked.

"Yes, we spoke from the same platform in the Academy of Music during a Red Cross drive. I wasn't governor then. I was just a truckman." (The governor was chairman of the directors of a truck corporation after his one defeat for governor.)

FOREST FIRE AT GOLD HILL WAS A COSTLY ONE

GOLD HILL, Aug. 23.—The large forest fire which started last week at the mouth of Galls creek is still taking its toll of timber. The fire raged up the creek, destroying the Douglas houses of Mr. Danielson, Mr. Douglas and Ben Edgington. It crossed over the hill and at present is burning heavy near the Lively lime plant. The fire endangered the buildings at the plant and the home of Ed Shoemaker, but has turned its course in towards the head of Galls creek. When the flames started to spread west from the creek, they were halted by a green thicket of timber.

An exceptionally large crew of men are kept busy fighting. A report this morning from one of the fire fighters states that the flames are going heavy upon the head of Galls creek but the fire is fairly under control. The center of operations is near the head of Miller gulch.

The forest fire outlook seemed bad when both the fire on Gold Hill mountain and the one on Galls creek were burning. Both fires endangered several homes and caused property loss. Houses were burned, but most valuable, several men lost the wood which they had cut this summer. Jim Cornutt lost about 100 tiers of split wood, Clyde Walker lost about 10 cords and the Lively Lime company has suffered a loss of about 50 cords of wood. Several lives have been endangered by the fires but no serious accident has happened so far.

While working at camp Monday, Guy Moore got his eye hurt by a flying chip. He was taken to Medford immediately by his nephew Mr. Sookley, for treatment.
