Liquor Violator Fined and Jailed

W. L. Turpin, local character who has long been suspected of bootleg operations, made the mistake of his life last Monday, when after he had negotiated with a man, who said he was a hunter about to leave the city on a deer hunt, to sell him a gallon jug of moonshine, which he was to deliver in this man's car, when would be driven to a designated place on Front street.

The car came along all right and stopped at the right spot, but the driver proved to be another man, E. E. Oakes, state prohibition enforcement officer, who grabbed and arrested Turpin when he reached out his hand for the money for the booze.

The original negotiator was another under-cover agent.

That is why Turpin pleaded guilty in Judge Taylor's court yesterday afternoon, and received a $100 fine and 90 days jail sentence.
