

BUTTE FALLS MEN BOOSTING BAKER FOR SUPERVISOR

BUTTE FALLS, Oct. 2.—(Special)—A delegation of citizens from the Butte Falls district called this morning during the regular first meeting of the month session of the county court, and filed a request that Hendrick Baker be appointed road supervisor for that district. There were five men and four women in the delegation.

The spokesman explained to the court that Mr. Baker was especially well qualified for the position, and highly recommended by former employers. They desired that he be appointed at once, but the county court ruled that no appointment could be made until the regular time, January 1, and that the matter would be acted at the regular road meeting to be held in November.

"You know how we pull up there," said one of the visitors to Commissioner Victor Bursell. The commissioner replied that he did, and complimented the district upon their harmony the past five years.

Baker is urged to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Hankin in an auto accident six weeks ago. A lively contest is looming for the position.

A delegation of Ashland citizens called and asked for a distribution of the county library fund, claiming that they were called upon to furnish books, etc., to seven districts adjacent to Ashland for which the Medford library received funds, but had failed to supply. A special levy is made by the city of Ashland for the library, and it is exempt from the county levy. The county court took the matter under advisement and learn the Medford library's side of the question.

A protest was filed against the further payment by the county of a $25 per month pension to a widow living in the Winer district. The protestant claimed that the widow, beside the $25 she received $30 per month for the death of a son, had held a considerable amount of timber from her homestead this summer, and had refused to rent portions of her land. Therefore the pension from the county was viewed as "useless spending of the taxpayers' money." The county court took the protest under advisement for investigation, and thanked the protestant for his information.

The rest of the session was devoted to routine matters and the approval of the regular batch of bills.

A. F. STENNETT RETURNS FROM EASTERN TRIP

"Yes, I am glad to get home," said A. F. Stennett, Mail-Tribune foreman and secretary of Medford Typographical Union, on his return to work today, after a five weeks' tour of the country, during which he visited 27 states, two provinces of Canada, and attended the international typographical convention in Charleston, South Carolina, as a delegate from southern Oregon.

"I wouldn't live in New York City on a lot," said the veteran make-up man emphatically. "When I set up at 6 o'clock in the morning I don't want somebody poking me in the back and stepping on my heels. I found Broadway as crowded at 7 a. m. as at noon and as at 3 p. m. Just a crazy mob, jostling each other, and not speaking, for no one knows anyone else down there. At 2 a. m. the traffic cops at Broadway and Forty-second street were as busy as at 5 p. m. New Yorkers may sleep, but they don't sleep at the same time. I was glad to get out of the crazy jam."

"The only place I might prefer to Medford was Washington City—that's good looking, quiet and sane. The south showed little signs of change—few improvements, except in North Carolina, which is more like an up-and-coming northern state and might be carried by the Republicans this year.

"Politics? Well, I tried to get the convention to take a straw vote on the presidential candidates, but nothing doing. The Typographical Union is strictly non-partisan. When I mentioned politics to southerners most of them looked pained and said nothing. They don't like Smith and they hate Republicans worse than poison. Talked with one Texas Democrat—E. E. Kelly—and he not only had the initials and name of our local Democratic war horse, but was almost as big. He said he couldn't see Al Smith and Tammany. Considered Hoover a flat-head, but was going to vote for him. Another Texas Democrat said Hoover had no more chance of carrying Texas than the Washington monument. So there you are. I think there will be a lot of non-voting in the south this year, and while Hoover may carry one or two of the southern states, the south as a whole will go Democratic but with decreased majorities.

"In Virginia, I got an appointment with Carter Glass but auto trouble made me late, and I failed to see him.

"Prohibition? Yes, there's about as much of it in New York City as in Canada."

Mr. Stennett, an enthusiastic Democrat, is still strong for Al Smith, but does not appear sanguine of his election. He said he found the Smith-Hoover sentiment in New York state about evenly divided, with the final result a toss-up.

Two $20 bills, lost in the local postoffice Saturday by Ellen Konop and advertised in the Monday afternoon Mail Tribune, were returned to her the following day by Earl James, 1211 N. Niantic, painter, who found the purse a few moments after it was lost.

Mr. James, who is a newcomer in Medford, said that he had been watching the lost and found ads in the paper for two days, and upon seeing no notice of the money he had found, was on the verge of putting an ad in the paper himself, when he discovered the notice in Monday's paper.

BUSINESS WOMEN PLAN ACTIVITIES AT DINNER PARTY

Plans for winter activities were discussed last evening at a well-attended dinner meeting of members and guests of the Business and Professional Women's club at the Hotel Medford, which officially opened the season.

Glimpses of seven different European countries were given by Miss Elizabeth Burr, assistant county school superintendent, who was a member of the Temple tour party this summer.

"One typical day in Amsterdam my companions and I sought a park and shade. Later we decided to get some refreshments and went to a place where they serve patrons around tables on the street on all sides of us were people drinking beer and stronger things. A waiter came up to us. He looked us over carefully, then looked at the others and said to us, 'What will you have, tea, water or lemonade?' We took lemonade." Miss Burr said.

Describing the customs of England she told about the traffic regulations including driving on the left hand side of the road, the signs which read "to be sold," instead of "for sale," and the popularity of bicycles. The party visited the Shakespeare country and saw "The Taming of the Shrew" at Stratford. "If you expect to go to Italy, plan your trip for the spring. We were there in the late summer and at Rome it was 94 in the shade," Miss Burr remarked.

Another interesting feature of the program was a group of songs by Merland Tolleson, who came here with his parents recently from Portland. He was accompanied on the piano by Miss Myrtle Tobey, instructor in English at the high school.

In the absence of the president of the club, Mrs. Roy Elliott, who is ill, Miss Mabel Knight presided last evening. It is the plan of the members to have a number of special meetings within the near future, one of them being a reception for Miss Emily Kneubuhl, national executive secretary of New York who is expected to arrive here this month.

Among the officials, who are expected to be here tomorrow is W. H. Grebe, manager of the Portland branch. Factory men who will assist Mr. Garnett include N. A. Appraisers Named in Conroy Estate by Judge Sparrow

Mrs. Helen Mar Conroy was appointed administratrix and John Wilkinson, John Orth and Leon Haskins, appraisers of the estate left by the late Dr. Conroy as one of the first official acts performed by Alex Sparrow, new county judge.

The estate has a probable net value of $5000, annual rental value of $500 and equities and interests in real property and other personal property amounting to around $2000, according to a petition filed in the county court house by the widow, Mrs. Helen Mar Conroy. A bond of $4000 on the Fidelity and Deposit company of Maryland was taken out by the administratrix through the Danforth Insurance company, local agents.

BEDDING ROLL SAVES CAR FROM BAD SMASH

A roll of bedding tucked across the front of her Chevrolet coupe, was all that saved the car belonging to Mrs. E. H. Page of Twin Bridges, Mont., from being completely demolished, according to witnesses who saw the accident between the Chevrolet and a Studebaker sedan driven by H. Tucker of Medford in front of the Beebe & Rindall service station at Central Point this morning.

Mrs. Page, according to a report given to Sheriff Ralph Jennings, was driving south and in making the turn on the highway coming toward Medford, collided with the Studebaker. Both cars were considerably damaged, but neither occupants were injured seriously.

FEDERAL COURT OPENING GRIST BOOTLEG CASES

The defense in the trial of the government against Cal Callender and Gus Hirschberger, in the federal court opened this afternoon.

Mrs. Elsie Callender, wife of one of the defendants, was the first witness. She testified that she was the owner of the taxi service in Chiloquin, and was excused without cross-examination by the government.

United States District Attorney George Neuner arrived this morning and took part in the prosecution at the afternoon session.

Both defendants will be called to the stand in their own behalf. Elsie Callender and Gus Hirschberger, residents of Chiloquin, metropolis of the Klamath Indian reservation, went on trial in the federal court this morning, charged with sale and possession of liquor. It was the opening case of the annual session of the federal court for the southern Oregon district, with Federal Judge Robert S. Bean of Portland presiding.

The defendants are specifically charged with the sale of a bottle of moonshine to special prohibition agents of the government last June, the amount involved being $2, and it is alleged that the transaction took place on the road near Chiloquin, the bottled beverage being procured from beneath a log, after the preliminaries had been arranged at the Callender residence.

Earl Kohler, special enforcement officer of the prohibition bureau, testified that he and his partner, Ralph Kelly, now a deputy sheriff of Washington county, Oregon, residing at Hillsboro, were the key witnesses for the government. Kelly, under cross-examination, admitted conviction for a crime. They corroborated each other's testimony, the gist of which was as follows:

That Kelly, who was acquainted with the Chiloquin liquor dealers in company with Kohler, and Godfrey, another special agent, journeyed to Chiloquin and met Hirschberger, operator of a taxi. He drove the agents to the Callender residence, where Kohler testified, he made representations that he was in the Klamath and Chiloquin districts "to get a line on the liquor dealers."

Callender testified Kohler, informed him, "that I am only in the bottle business now," whereupon the special agent asked him what he thought of Ben Mitchell (alleged to be one of the Klamath bootleg kings, and scheduled for trial on a liquor conspiracy charge) as a wholesale moonshine dealer.

Defendant Callender, who was testified, replied, "that an Indian by the name of Rufus handled more liquor than Mitchell" and also was alleged to have expressed himself as being somewhat dubious about doing business with Mitchell.

After this exchange, it was testified, Kelly said to Kohler: "Don't be so tight. Loosen up and buy a bottle," whereupon it was asserted Callender said, "I guess we can fix you up." All then entered the taxi, and drove to the log cache. The special agents testified that Hirschberger procured the bottle of moonshine, and Callender received the money for it. The payment was made by Kohler, who held five silver dollars in his hand, while Callender removed three of them.

The defense attorney, George M. Roberts of this city, subjected the two government agents to a rigid cross-examination, and brought out from Kelly that he had a wide acquaintance among the "liquor dealers" on the Klamath reservation. The court admonished witness Kelly to "speak louder." The defense also attempted to show discrepancies between the testimony given by the special agents this morning, and that given by them at the hearing before the United States commissioners.

A jury to hear the trial was drawn this morning. The case is expected to be finished late this afternoon.

The case of Mike Murphy, originally set for this morning, was postponed for a couple of days.

ATTORNEY FEES SALIENT POINT SUIT ARMISTICE

An attorney fee of two may settle the difference between plaintiff and defendant, but it takes a one-sided argument and plenty of strong words to settle the difference between a client and his own attorney when the plaintiff and defendant get together and decide to settle their suit out of court, according to C. M. Skene and H. B. Lewis, who made the rounds of the court house departments today trying to get their case dismissed from the docket.

Mr. Skene, a local contractor, had entered suit thru his attorney, against Mr. Lewis for $250, which the latter is said to have owed him on some carpenter supplies. The controversy had been filed and the bond for the arrest of the defendant set, when the two principals decided to talk things over and settle their differences without the aid of their attorneys. But there loomed the matter of attorney fees, and that, according to Mr. Skene, called for moral courage and an unlimited vocabulary, both of which the plaintiff admits to possess.
