

NEWS of the DAY in PICTURES

THE MOUNTAIN THAT WAS GOD, as the Indians used to call Mount Rainier, looms majestically back of this red-skinned warrior who, dressed in the garb of his ancestor, poses for a moment beside a little pool in Rainier National Park.

GOOD FORM is everything in gymnasium work, thinks Kathryn Crawford, movie star. So she practices every day—or something like that—on the horizontal bar in her own back yard.

SPINNING WHEELS AND FLASHING BROWN LEGS AND BODIES GO TEARING AROUND THE ARENA as bike riders compete in the National Amateur Bicycle Races at Kenosha, Wis. This shows Bobby Thomas of Kenosha leading in the sprint lap of the one-mile junior event.

A DRINK IS A DRINK, even if you have to go get it for yourself. That's the opinion of Jocko the monkey, shown here as he investigates an old-time water pump by the roadside on the outskirts of London.

THE QUIET BEAUTY OF THE ENGLAND THAT USED TO BE still exists in quiet corners of the British countryside. Here is a thatcher, hard at work renewing the straw roof of a farmhouse in East Anglia. Modern roofing construction has not yet displaced the thatcher from his ancient calling.

SWOOPING DOWN IN AN IMPRESSIVE WELCOME, these U. S. navy pursuit planes circle close over the field, in battle formation, at the close of the National Air Derby at Los Angeles. Parked below are planes that participated in the Class A division of the race.

YOUNGEST PIPER of all is Billy Armstrong of Vancouver, B. C., who tooted his pipes at the recent Highland gathering in Banff, Alberta, when pipers from all over Canada assembled.

MAGNIFICENTLY THRILLING, EVEN IF SOMEWHAT OUT OF DATE, the cavalry comes thundering up the slope with colored pennons fluttering from tilted lances. The picture was taken during recent maneuvers of the Italian army.

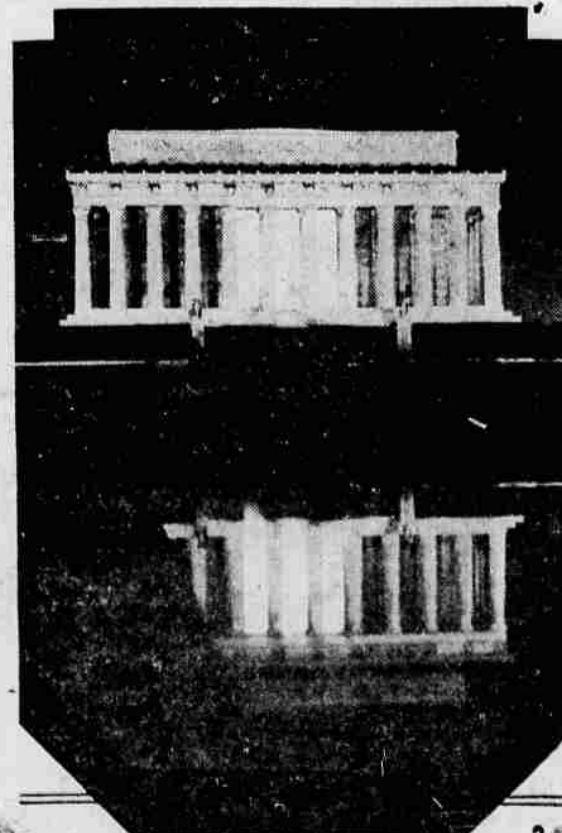

THIS IS ALL THAT IS LEFT OF THE BUSINESS SECTION of the thriving town of Davis, S. D., struck with devastating force by a tornado the other day. Note how the automobiles shown were wrecked by the blast.

A DARK CITY hidden on a mysterious underground highway beneath the Colorado river is described by Reuben Hunt, Colorado prospector, who says he found it in the southwestern desert recently. He is trying to interest University of California architects in his discovery, saying the city has buried riches.

DELICATE COLORS AND FABRICS combined with laces are used in this dainty sleeveless night dress of peach colored satin, displayed by a New York importer. The fully bouclair cap is made to match.

DAZZLING WHITE MARBLE on a jet-black setting—that's the beautiful Lincoln Memorial, at Washington, as seen at night. Note how the reflection of the building stands out in the pool below.
