

Local and Personal

Local hunters today were beginning to make preparations for the opening of the China pheasant season next week, and a number were attempting to obtain permission to hunt on private lands, liberally posted with trespass notices. The season will be open for two weeks and the first two or three days will hear the incessant popping of shotguns during the early morning hours when hunting is best.

At this time last year, Jackson county was in the midst of three contagious disease epidemics, and according to reports from the county health unit this year, the health of the county is far above average.

During September and October of 1927, typhoid fever claimed over 40 victims, several of whom died, and infantile paralysis was the cause of many rural schools closing in various parts of the county. In the Central Point district, diphtheria was a serious problem and in that city the disease was the cause of two deaths.
