40%... 50%... 60% GASOLINE in your oil!

Not when you buy the oil—there's no gasoline in it then. But if you use "wet" gasoline it soon dilutes your lubricant.

"Wet" gasoline doesn't vaporize completely—it can't burn cleanly—and much of it runs down the cylinder walls into the crankcase. Naturally your oil is soon ruined—its "body" is gone—it is too thin to lubricate your motor properly. Besides, you've wasted fuel—cheated yourself of the extra miles your gasoline should have given you.

Would you avoid this condition? It is easily done. Simply be careful to buy "dry" gas. There is a "dry" gas now—Shell 400.

Careful refining eliminates heavy "wet" fractions, and all of your Shell 400 goes into power, into mileage—the things you buy gasoline for.

Yellow and red Shell pumps are everywhere convenient. Make them your stop signals whenever your tank needs filling.

A thousand miles of ordinary driving with "wet" gasoline and your oil is likely diluted more than half—thinned beyond use as a lubricant. Note this example of old crankcase oil—54% gasoline!

A thousand miles with "dry" gas and there is very little crankcase dilution—here are the results of a typical test: Gasoline 9.2%, lubricant 90.8%—a decided fuel and oil saving over "wet" gas.

And about oil: There's an oil now that forms no hard, flinty carbon. If you would avoid the endless troubles caused by carbon, and "add thousands of miles to the life of your car," insist on SHELL MOTOR OIL whenever you buy
