

NEWS of the DAY in PICTURES

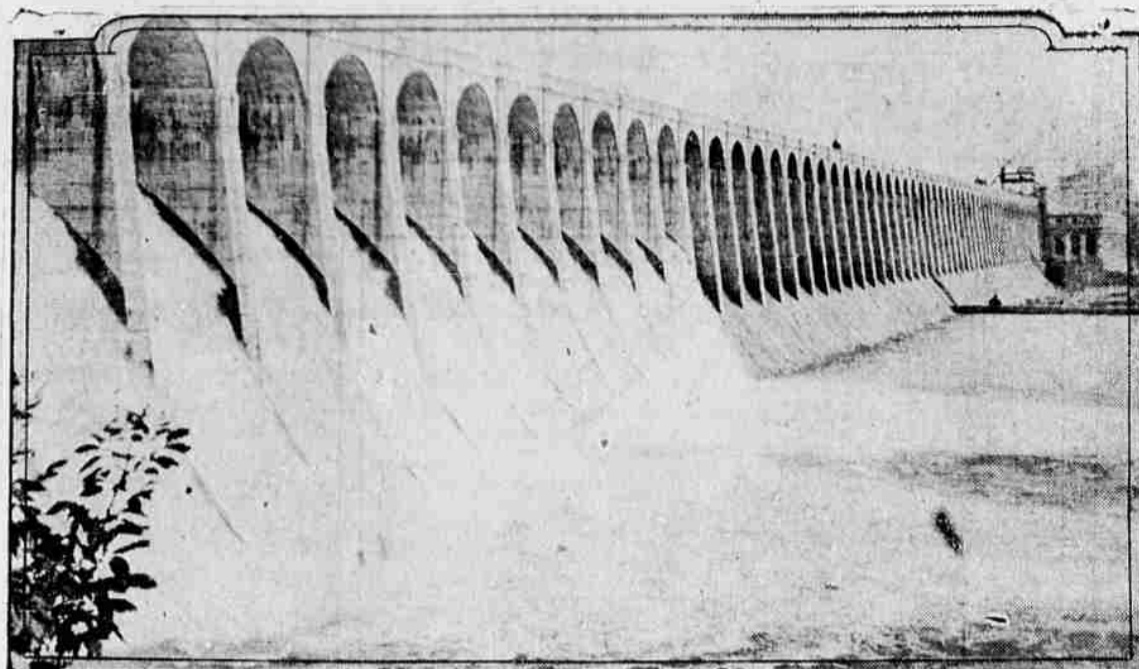

A PILLAR OF SMOKE BY DAY and a pillar of fire by night is this terrific conflagration at oil well No. 17, Santa Fe Springs, near Los Angeles. The blaze has been burning for two weeks, despite the efforts of 100 workmen to check it.

THE BRINY DEEP is just like home to Clara Bow, famous "it" girl of the films. Here she is, snapped on the yacht of a friend in Los Angeles harbor.

IF A CAT may look at a king, as the proverb says, why can't it vote for a president as well? Maybe that's what went through the mind of this Persian kitty which strolled into Hoover headquarters in Washington the other day and refused to be put out.

CONGRESSMEN, SENATORS AND PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES have discussed it repeatedly during the past few years—and here is the great Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, spanning the Tennessee river in man-made grandeur. In the foreground, water can be seen pouring over the spillway; at the right is a glimpse of the powerhouse containing eight giant turbines, with facilities for installation of 10 more.

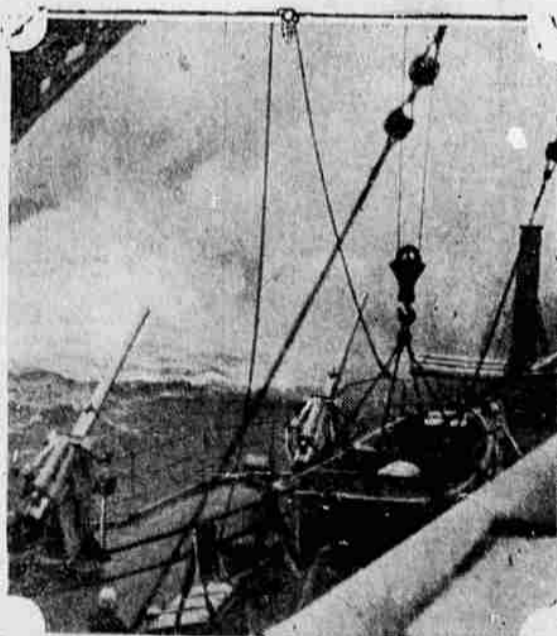

SUNLIGHT LINGERS ON THE PEAKS while the valley is buried in shadow as twilight descends on the Canadian Rockies to give this striking picture of the new Banff Springs Hotel, bright with a myriad lights.

THEY MUST BE TANNED, must the South Sea chorus in a Philadelphia musical comedy; so now that the beaches are too chilly they're getting their tan by artificial means. Here's Marguerite de Corsey, seated, getting a coat from Elve Adams.

OVER THE HURDLES goes Miss Jane Wyatt, guiding her horse with the skill of a born rider, at the annual Tuxedo Park Horse Show, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

GAY IN THE GROTESQUE COSTUMES OF PREHISTORIC TIMES, these champion dancers of the Oklahoma Indian tribes held a pow-wow in honor of Vice Presidential Candidate Charles Curtis at Pawnee, Okla. The festival was under the supervision of the famous Maj. Gordon W. Lillie (Pawnee Bill).

PARIS CAFES have no revues that are much franker than the one in Hollywood, Calif., which houses the famous Pom Pom revue. Here is pretty Cherry Revere, one of the Pom Pom's stars.

HARD KNOCKS AND PLENTY OF THEM is the rule of football—and this case is no exception. The picture shows Domin Noctura, with the ball, being treated to a hard tackle by John Clingman. Both are on Temple University's squad.

THE QUIET BEAUTY OF RURAL ENGLAND was never displayed more appealingly than in this picture of a settlement along the River Teify, in Wales, where the old-time coracle men make their living by fishing for salmon. Note the odd little boats on the banks.
