RADIO TALK FOR VICTOR BURSSELL COMMISSIONER

In the interests of Victor Bursell, the Republican candidate for county commissioner, for re-election to a second term, following is a part of the broadcast given over KMED last night.

"There was outstanding on December 31, 1927, $448,000 of Jackson county road bonds. The county court advertised in December in the local papers of New York, Chicago and Seattle, to purchase these road bonds at a price to not .02 1/2 percent interest.

"The court was criticized by some for offering too high a premium. If that is the case, why is it the court has only been offered and bought for cancellation and investment but $39,000 of the $448,000 outstanding since January 1, 1927?

"We quote a letter received from E. H. Rollins & Sons, Investment Bond Brokers, Boston, New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, to the county clerk:

"In reply to your letter of March 8, we beg to advise that we were unsuccessful in obtaining $104,000 Jackson county road bonds, for which you offered a 2.50 percent basis last December. The bulk of this block of bonds was owned by a large bank who refused to sell them at any price, strange as this may seem. If we are successful in locating any further blocks of Jackson County Road Bonds we will promptly get in touch with you."

"This letter shows that Jackson county bonds have a high rating—in fact the highest rating of any road bonds in any county of Oregon. It also shows that the present county court, of which Victor Bursell has been accused by his enemies of altering its policies, have handled the county's affairs in such shape that even the other seventeen counties receiving U. S. O. refund moneys, do not show as high a financial rating of their bonds.

Fair Levy
"Certain parties have circulated erroneous reports as to the expenditures for construction of the Jackson county fair buildings. The election for fair boys of one mill tax was advertised by the fair board, with assurance to the public that the fair buildings would be constructed in time for use during the 1928 season.

"The levy was approved by the people by a vote of 2400 in favor of the levy and 1009 against it. Following a wish of this majority the fair board immediately began construction in order to finance the same appealed to the county court for aid. The court agreed providing the fair board would give the county general fund the first moneys received from the fair levy to the extent of money advanced from the county's general fund for the immediate construction purposes.

"The fair board gave the county court a letter in the form of an order to that effect, signed by C. E. Gates as president, and H. O. Frohach as secretary. The county court therefore felt it their duty to carry out the wish of the voters as it was sponsored by both the business men and Granges throughout the entire county.

"If this had not been done money would not have become available until after the first tax paying period May 5, 1929, when first half would have been paid, and the balance would not have come in in time for use for fair purposes until the 1930 fair.

"The county's general fund had sufficient cash on hand to take care of all the expenditures for construction, repairs and printing, amounting to about $27,000, which is $6000 less than the fair levy provides.

"Under the law the county court could not draw warrants against the fair fund until the money was collected and in the treasurer's hands, so were forced to use general fund moneys if buildings were to be built before 1929 or 1930. In doing this they complied with the people's wishes and vote.

"A vote for Victor Bursell is a vote to give a second term to an efficient practical conscientious official and a man who has made a success of his own business."

PRODIGAL TERRIER RETURNS TO HOME, AGED MAN HAPPY

The one-room shack of Henry Boyd, 74, which sets away back on an otherwise vacant lot off Crater Lake avenue, was a sad, sad world in which to move with Wrinkles gone. Wrinkles is one and a half year old—part Fox Terrier and part tramp—but one of the best pals Henry Boyd ever had.

Every evening when he came home from feeding Ross—oh, yes, Ross is the other member of the Boyd family, a 19-year-old mare, and she comes from trotting stock, too, yes, sir. Every day when Henry Boyd came home there was Wrinkles, waiting on the doorstep, with that little tramp smile of hers, to greet him.

When Henry mowed lawns or did other odd jobs for the folks on the east side, Wrinkles romped and played with the kiddies of the neighborhood. Sometimes she accompanied them on jaunts out across the vacant lots. But Henry always knew where she was—until Saturday night.

It might be that Ross had some sort of a premonition. She acted more affectionate than usual Saturday night. She snuggled her cold nose against Henry's shoulder as he tried to curry her, and rubbed her big head along his sleeve, as though she wanted to detain him.

And, when he reached home, for the first time Wrinkles wasn't there. Henry chuckled to himself as he thought that she was up to some prank, and entering the shack he began to prepare their evening meal. Then he went out and called. He secured the neighborhood, asking everyone he met if they had seen Wrinkles. No one had.

Henry returned to his shack, but he didn't eat the meal he had prepared. He couldn't sleep that night, and often he went to the door and called:

"Wrinkles."

All he received was a sympathetic neigh from Ross in the distance. Sunday the children who had played with Wrinkles joined in the search. Lydia King, county nurse, was notified by Mrs. Howard Schaffel, who in turn notified the Humane society, who made arrangements to broadcast news of the loss over the local radio station Monday evening.

Henry went about his tasks Monday with a heavy heart, unaware of the efforts that were being made in his behalf. At 5 o'clock he went over to feed Ross, and at 5:30 he returned wearily to his shack. There, on the doorstep, sat Wrinkles, her short tail wagging and her little tramp grin all set to greet him.

"And I asked her no questions. I was so glad to see her. Well—I don't know which of us was really the happiest over that reunion. Wrinkles or me. And as for the 24-year-old man attempted to smile manfully through the tears that just couldn't help come, there was no doubt in the minds of his neighbors as to just which of the two was the happier.

'ANN MANAGES' TO BE HEARD TONIGHT

With a well-rehearsed cast who have all but memorized their lines in the play, Miss Helen Norris is anticipating with enthusiasm the addition of her latest radio drama, "Ann Manages," which is to be broadcast by the Copen players over KMED, the Mail Tribune-Victoria station, from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight.

Humor and pathos are cleverly interwoven in this little drama of mountain folk and misguided bootleggers, which is generally conceded to be the very best play Miss Norris has attempted so far.

The cast of players in tonight's production includes Jo Murray Rostel, Melba Williams, Mary Greiner, Earl Davis, Fletcher Fish, and Harold Corliss.

'White Collars' at Medford's Playhouse

The new play house, the home of Franks' Comedians, in the new Childers building on East Main street, opened last week.

"White Collars" will be the next play, beginning Thursday. It is a typical American drama, telling of the marriage of a millionaire to his private secretary against the wishes of the girl's family.

Has Judge Thomas Speeded Up Justice?

Throughout his term of office, he has claimed he has. He has told it to editors and reporters and published the statement so widely that some newspapers believe it, and advocate his election upon that ground.

BUT HE HAS RETARDED AND THWARTED JUSTICE

He has been the cause of his court reporter delaying the making of the copies of the evidence so that appeals taken to the Supreme Court had to be dismissed.

This record must be there by the first day of the Supreme Court term next following the appeal.

Judge Thomas has extended the time for these appeals for months and months in order to enable the litigant to get the record from the Judge's court reporter, although the litigant had already paid the reporter for making the record.

Then when the cases were filed in the Supreme Court, the reporter caused to be filed there his affidavits stating that he had been paid for the record but had not had time to get it out. These showings caused the Supreme Court in every instance to allow the person appealing further time. The Supreme Court in each case continued to do this until the limit provided by law had been reached. In some cases the court reporter finally got out his record and the appellant filed it in the Supreme Court promptly, but it was too late to save the appeal. The litigant lost the money he had paid to the court reporter for the record, running into hundreds of dollars, the amount he had paid for his printed briefs, and also the right to appeal which the law guaranteed him.

We will give a few instances:

MCNAIR VS. LOUGHRIDGE SUPREME COURT NO. 16021 JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF FOR $12,100.00

Judge Thomas gave the defendant six extensions of time, covering seven months, to get the record from Judge Thomas' court reporter; then the case had to be filed in the Supreme Court. That court gave the defendant many similar extensions based upon the court reporter's affidavits that he had not had time to make the record. Finally he got out the record, but too late to save the appeal. The defendant had paid the court reporter more than $500.00 and spent upwards of $200.00 in other Supreme Court costs. The Supreme Court dismissed the appeal because the record had been delayed too long. The case was not reversed. Judge Thomas has taken credit for not being reversed in this case.

WALKER VS. FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. SUPREME COURT NO. 11485 JUDGMENT FOR $15,000.00 AGAINST DEFENDANT

This went through the same delays, and extensions were granted upon similar affidavits made by Judge Thomas' court reporter, that he could not get out the record.

He did not get it out in time to save the appeal and the appellant lost his right to appeal. It also lost the money it had paid to the court reporter and the money it had paid for printing the briefs, amounting in all to more than $1,000.00, but this kept Judge Thomas from being reversed and he has the credit for having been affirmed in that case.

REED VS. ORR DISMISSED BY THE SUPREME COURT, JULY 21, 1927

In this case Judge Thomas knocked out a $7,000.00 mortgage that Orr had given for the purchase price of a piece of property and the rely allowed Orr to keep the property without paying for it. This case went through the same delays, for the same reasons. Orders were made by Judge Thomas, based upon Judge Thomas' court reporter's affidavits that he had not gotten out the record, and subsequent orders by the Supreme Court granting time for Judge Thomas' court reporter to get the record typewritten and into the Supreme Court. Although the appellant had paid the reporter over $500.00 to get this record, he did not get it in time to save his appeal and the Supreme Court dismissed it for that reason.

This is another one of the cases in which Judge Thomas claims he was affirmed.

HOGAN VS. MASON MOTOR COMPANY SUPREME COURT NO. 11610 JUDGMENT ENTERED BEFORE JUDGE THOMAS FOR PLAINTIFF, JUNE 23, 1925

Judge Thomas granted, in various orders, until March 15, 1926, in which to file in the Supreme Court. Reason: Court reporter had not gotten out record. February 1, 1927, Supreme Court granted until March 15, 1927, to enable Thomas' court reporter to get out this record, stating it granted the time "so far as may be lawfully done,"—indicating that the appeal was dead. February 26, 1927, Judge Thomas' reporter finally got out the record. Case not yet dismissed.

We will cite more cases. The foregoing is only an index of what the public should know as to the great delays that have been made and the wrongs that have been done because Judge Thomas' court reporter could not keep his obligations to get out the records in the time required by law. These are not the "law's delays" but are Judge Thomas' delays.

Those who know conditions assert, and we believe, that the reporter was overburdened with the writing of political letters and other political documents, at public expense, for publicity and political advancement of Judge Thomas.

There is filed in the office of the President of the League, an itemized statement taken from the records, showing what happened in the foregoing cases. You are welcome to inspect it.

Yours for a Judge who will attend to the business of the Court as the law contemplates, without regard to his political future.
