South Central avenue, between Main street and Eighth street, is rapidly taking on the appearance of the scene of mining operations, as the result of work by employes of the city water department attempting to locate and stop water pipe leaks under the street. One leak was found yesterday, and efforts were being made today to find another. It is the belief of a number of local old-timers that a spring exists under the street level, one having been there years ago. As a result of the leaks, water has stood along the street curbings for sometime past.
