

NEWS of the DAY in PICTURES

SPRING WON'T BE HERE FOR MANY A FROST-BOUND MONTH, but there isn't any harm in practicing so you'll know how to greet it. That, at least, must be the idea back of this festive dance staged by these Albertina Rasch chorus girls.

WELL DRESSED Canadian girls this winter will wear coats of red and white brushed wool, like this one—that is, they will if they're lucky. This one is displayed by Miss Barbara Kent, movie star.

ETERNAL PEACE AND UNDYING MAJESTY of snow-capped mountain and rustling pine forest make the great northwest a region of endless delight. This shows Pass Creek in Waterton Lakes National Park in the Canadian Rockies, just across the border from Glacier National Park.

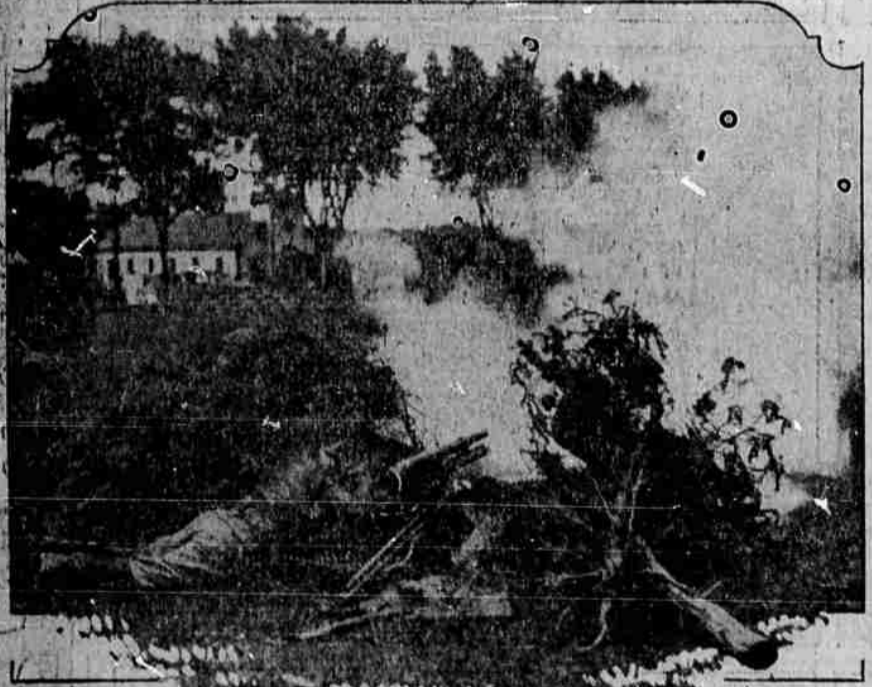

PONIES PRANCE AND RIDERS LEAN as the American and Argentine teams contend for the world's polo championship. This picture was taken during the second game, won by the Argentines; the U. S. took the other two games and the title.

THIS HARDLY LOOKS SENSIBLE, but what do you expect at a college flag rush and field day? This shows the freshman team at Northeastern University, Boston, winning the six-legged race in the annual inter-class competition.

CHIP, good-natured Chimpanzee shown above, got his first view of the United States the other day when his owner, Raymond P. Cutler, of Bristol, Me., landed him from East Africa at Boston.

NOTHING WAS QUIET ALONG THE POTOMAC when army authorities staged their big military carnival and exposition at Washington Barracks, D. C., recently. Here is a scene from a reproduction of a World War battle, with a "German" machine gunner blazing away from behind some bushes.

MOSTLY FURS is this costume, devised and worn by Miss Cornelia Wilson of New York as an interpretation of what will be worn in—oh, say about 1980.

HOME PORT OF MERCHANT SHIPS SINCE THE DAYS OF FROBISHER and Drake, the famous "pool" of London, surrounded by tiers of warehouses, is shown here in the left center, with the river Thames winding around to the right and the famous Tower bridge in the foreground.

THE MAN ON THE BOTTOM OF THIS PILE isn't going to feel quite the same after the whistle blows, but that's all in the game. This particular game was one in which the University of Southern California defeated Utah Agricultural College, 40-12, at Los Angeles. Russ Saunders, California fullback, is shown carrying the ball.

SHOT FULL OF HOLES is this target, which got riddled when the U. S. S. California unloaded her broadsides at it off the Pacific coast recently. Poking their heads through the holes are sailors from the gun crews that did the shooting.

THEY'VE GONE CRAZY OVER HER, have the film executives—and Miss Helen Twelvetrees, now beginning her movie career, is believed to have a brilliant future assured.
