

COAST LEAGUE DEADLOCK HOLDS ELECTION VOTING

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 12.—(AP) Deadlocked after 19 ballots with William H. McCarthy of San Francisco, holding four votes but unable to garner the fifth and deciding one, directors of the Pacific Coast baseball league today postponed election of a president until later in the afternoon.

McCarthy, former president of the league, who recently resigned as head of the San Francisco Mission club, was nominated by Wade "Red" Kiffner, president of the Missions. Following a second, McCarthy was given the votes of the San Francisco Seals, Missions, Los Angeles and Sacramento. This quartet held all the way through for McCarthy.

Judge W. W. McCredie, former owner of the Portland club, was nominated by Thomas W. Turner, now head of the Portland outfit, and had the latter's vote all the way through.

John Sullivan, Seattle lawyer, who one time was interested in the Seattle club, had Seattle's vote from the start.

Oakland, represented by J. Cal Ewing, voted for Al Baum, a one-time president of the league, and now sports editor of a San Francisco newspaper.

On the ninth ballot, however, Oakland switched to McCredie.

William "Bill" Lane of the Hollywood club, first vice-president of the league, opened the meeting and gave McCredie his vote on nearly every ballot, changing to Harry Williams, incumbent president of the league, on the ninth ballot.

VETERANS MARCH PORTLAND PARADE

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 12.—(AP) Portland observed Armistice day with a parade in which 25 veteran and allied organizations participated. At 11 a. m. there was a pause in the parade, and the sound of "Taps" reverberated along the line of march. Citizens lined their heads.

Most stores in the city were closed in honor of the holiday.

GETCHEL QUALIFIES ON U. OF W. TEAM

Bayard Getchel has qualified for the first flight in a 54-hole qualifying test at the University of Washington first golf tournament.

Charles Hunter, school champion, and nationally known golfer won first honors with an average of 73 to place his handicap at scratch. Getchel now meets Adolf Lexner, who was last year's frosh champion.

Obituary

BARRY.—Thomas Barry passed away at the Sacred Heart hospital after an illness of several months. Mr. Barry was born in Elton, Ill., in 1863, where he passed his boyhood days. In 1888 he came to Oregon and has made his home here for the past 30 years. Mr. Barry is survived by one son, Thomas, of 751 West Jackson street.

Funeral services will be held at the Catholic church Tuesday morning, November 13, at 9 o'clock a. m. Rev. Father Black officiating. Interment in Jacksonville cemetery.

Mayberry Crashes.
SAN LEANDRO, Cal., Nov. 12.—(AP) James L. Mayberry, president of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation was injured seriously when his airplane crashed in a clump of trees near here. His engine stalled at 1500 feet, and the machine went into a flat tail spin. He jumped before the plane struck the trees.

Pastor Resigns.
PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 12.—(AP) Rev. Clement G. Clark, pastor of the First Congregational church since 1922, announced yesterday that he had resigned, but did not state any reason. Church officers said he had taken the action on his own initiative.

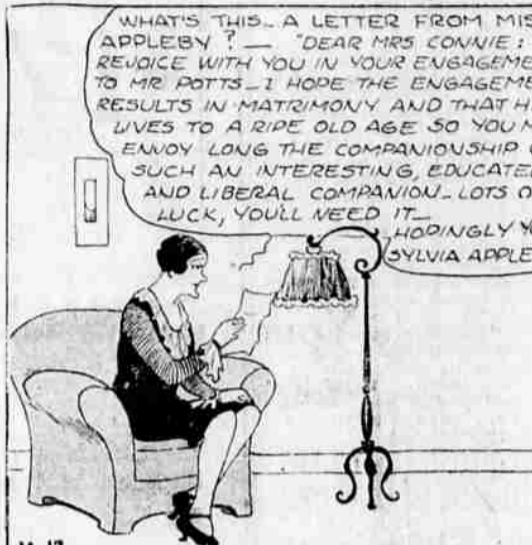

LANCASTER. Pa., Nov. 12.—(AP) Three quarters of a century ago Jacob Hestetter, Lancaster county farmer, produced his first crop of tobacco. He has raised a crop every year since.

WASHINGTON.—(AP) After a series of studies, department of agriculture specialists advise that chimneys in houses of frame construction always should be built from the ground up and should not be used to support any part of the house.

AIR LABORATORY LATEST SOLUTION OF FOG DANGERS

By Howard W. Blakeslee

(Associated Press Science Writer)
NEW YORK (AP)—The latest plan for solving aviation's fog menace, the establishment of a laboratory in the air, calls for planes and a fifty-mile stretch of airway.

The Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, Inc., announced in August that it would establish this fog laboratory, but the details were not disclosed.

The use of two planes is to measure what Harry P. Guggenheim, president of the fund, calls the most important objective of the experiments. This is to give scientists all over the country opportunity for such close touch with the fog experiment area that they may easily and quickly transfer their tests from their laboratories to the open air. One plane will be a fast ship to maintain this national communication, while the other is to be comparatively slow and stable flying laboratory.

The first of its kind for fog flying in the development of aviation. "In the laboratory, for example," says Mr. Guggenheim, "it is now possible to pick up an instrument from a desk and have it register the height above the desk, foot by foot, as you change its position. And it is possible in laboratories to dissipate fog by several methods. It now has to be applied aboard a flying plane and generally is a different problem. Most of the research workers on fog penetration have not had what they call a place to hang our hats, which is an actual airplane available to test their ideas on a real outdoor fog in a place where airmen are having the most fog troubles."

The location will be a section to go miles long, one of the main airways of the United States. It will be selected for its fog record and availability to research laboratories interested in aviation, such as the army and navy, industrial organizations and universities. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, special adviser for the Guggenheim fund, has been studying available locations.

The flying laboratory is designed to meet more than half way some of the risks involved in making tests of hitherto untried inventions. For example, it will be possible to use two pilots, one inside and the other outside, at a second set of controls. On a clear perfect day the pilot inside can make the experiment of handling his plane by instruments under conditions as blind as the world fog, while the outside pilot is as sure of safety.

"The device which aviators would 'name,' one to produce fog directly, at least enough to make a test."
