

Local and Personal

The Dead Indian road is in its winter condition now and can no longer be traveled until late next spring or early summer, because of deep mud, which alternately freezes and thaws. Besides there is from three inches to a foot of snow at the summit. However, the Wilkin Bay road on the Klamath side can be used for some time yet to travel to Lake of the Woods. This news was brought back today by Gene Rogers, ranger of the Dead Indian district of the Crater national forest, who was in the city today on business at the forestry headquarters office.

CHURCH REPLICA EXHIBITED TODAY

A beautiful replica of the new Catholic church, now under construction on the corner of Oakdale and Tenth streets, stands today in the window at 123 Main street, where the church bazaar opens Thursday, and continues thru Saturday evenings. The miniature church is made of pounds of home made fruit cake, the tan colored frosting on the sides being applied in reproduction of color and form, the bricks of the edifice, and the majestic frosting on top, forming the tile roof, with a golden cross extending above it. Even the stained glass windows have not been omitted in the costly model, and give the desired finish to the representation. The model has attracted considerable admiring comment thruout Medford yesterday and today.
