

BERT BATES GIVES PORTLAND THRILL WITH BAND BATON

Portland people must be impressed with the fact that Medford is a live-wire city after the events of yesterday. One of the comedy hits of yesterday's game was the stunt put on by Bert Bates, who impersonated an Italian bandmaster. Bert led the local "Ems" band. His antics drew a large crowd between halves and he was forced to respond to numerous encores. With the two bands and hundreds of ardent rooters, the "Medford spirit" registered heavily with the thousands who saw the big game.

Many old residents of this city were present to root for Medford and hundreds of Portland people joined in paying tribute to the "best high school team in the universe." Wm. Beveridge, Jr., who played end on the Medford high team back in 1912, greeted old friends in the Imperial lobby yesterday. He also gathered a crowd of old residents of this city to root for Medford at the big game.

Medford folks who missed the big championship game at Portland may soon be able to see the highlights of the day's events in the Copco News Reel. Horace Bromley, Copco advertising manager, accompanied the team on the trip and was busy shooting pictures here and there and everywhere. The Medford parade was filmed as it left the Imperial hotel, also en route, and as it arrived at the stadium. Considerable footage of the crowds, the cheer leaders in action, was also taken by "Tom" in addition to the main events of the big game. This morning the local camera man filmed the team members as they left the train and the big crowd which gathered at the station to greet them. When edited and titled the above films should give a comprehensive review of the trip and one which promises to be of great interest throughout all southern Oregon.

WOMEN RESCUED BY U. S. S. WYOMING

Mrs. Norman K. Batten (left) of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Mary Ulrich of New York with Capt. L. M. Overstreet aboard the U. S. S. Wyoming which landed them at Norfolk, Va., with six other survivors of the Vestris disaster. Mrs. Batten was acclaimed one of the heroines of the disaster. Her husband, an automobile racer, was lost after she made heroic efforts to save him.

PORTLAND—Plans made for construction of new 24-story building at Fourth and Morrison streets will be largest in city.

KLAMATH FALLS—Oregon Bank & Trust company secures site for new modern building.

GARDINER—Survey made for new road from here to North Fork of Smith river.

PORTLAND—Bids asked for furnishing one "crawler-type" tractor for use of forest service in this section.

REEDSFORT—Petition from residents asks for establishment of ferry service from here to Gardiner.

BAD WEATHER FOR FLYING HOLDS UP AERIAL MAILMEN

Along with the first snowfall this morning of the season in Medford and vicinity came cloudy and threatening weather all over the state and in California which made air-mail planes and other flying difficult—in fact, did away with it altogether, as up to 1:30 o'clock this afternoon neither the southbound or northbound air-mail planes, due here about 9 a. m. daily, had arrived, nor was it known where they were located.

Dense clouds in both directions prevented the flights, although for a time this forenoon it was thought possible that one or the other of the planes, or perhaps both, might have flown so high over the city and valley as not to be seen or heard.

The southbound West Coast passenger plane was still waiting at noon to hear from the Medford weather bureau as to the condition of weather here before possibly venturing on the southbound trip.

Incidentally, the difficult flying weather of today made much additional airways work and worry for L. W. Diek, head of the Medford weather bureau, and his assistant, Kenneth Anderson, as in addition to the regular weather bureau duties, it is the business of this bureau to furnish condition of air bulletins by phone and telegraph from all its substations in southern Oregon and adjacent California points, and locate as near as possible where the planes are flying or tied up.

This morning's now here, which amounted to three-tenths of an inch, coming as a surprise to the local public, was preceded by a very early morning fog which turned into rain at 6:50 a. m. Then at 7:15 a. m. this precipitation turned into a mixture of snow and rain, which let a number of people to think it was hail, and fell for 25 minutes, to be in turn followed by a fall of snow that lasted until 9:30 a. m. The remainder of the day still continued very cloudy, with light rainfall at times.

Rain and probably snow are forecast for tonight and Saturday.

While it was snowing and raining in Medford, much snow was falling in the high mountain districts. This forenoon the snow fall on the Siskiyou was reported here to amount to six inches. No reports as to how much snow fell on the Greenspring mountain highway and other mountainous localities had been received in Medford up to early this afternoon.

Their stock went up $100 a share Wednesday, making a rise of $300 for this week.

Under the direction of Charles E. Mitchell, as president, the National City Bank, the biggest in the world, has wisely interested itself in the little man.

It concentrates effort on its thrift department, compounding interest every three months for savers depositors. And it concentrates more than 480,000 names on its savings department books.

President Coolidge and common sense both advise that our loans to Europe be reduced, and that attention should be concentrated on developing THIS country.

While the nation and the bankers may decide to keep money here, Europe will not lack American dollars.

Government experts report that this year Americans, on trips abroad, will spend one thousand million dollars, one hundred million dollars above the expenditure of 1927.

That's the way to send American dollars to Europe, letting citizens that spend bring back experience and knowledge in exchange for money.

Lending money to build foreign warships, or to build competition for American industry, is not so wise.

The authorities of New York Zoo are worried because the amount of dust in the air shuts out ultraviolet rays coming from the sun. That is dangerous to the birds that need those rays.

Dirt and mud is in streets, and trucks rush through them, and are dangerous for the children. For the present that can't be helped.

It will interest future generations to know that the first playground on the roof, in New York City's richest street, was built for chow dogs.

Workers in Rhode Island mills have declared a strike and the union authorizes it.

Unfortunately, what textile workers and New England need is something that no strike will bring about, namely a restoration of New England's textile industry.

Some years ago the late Mr. Duke, whose millions are spent in the south, and whose ambition was to build up southern industry, said: "I will break every rough cotton mill in New England." A northern cotton mill owner said: "It isn't that he WILL do it, he has done it already."

New England's problem is to compete with cheap power, abundant labor, fine climate and freedom from labor troubles in the south. A powerful combination.

WEST MANN—Bids asked for laying 14-foot macadam roadway six inches thick on Hood street.

PORTLAND—Work on $2,170,000 street widening project voted by citizens will begin at once.
