Miss Hollywood Writes; Other Half Either Is Written About Or Writes About Itself

By Wade Werner.
(Associated Press Feature Writer)
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., (AP)—There are moments in this much-publicized movie metropolis when it is easy to believe that one half the population of Hollywood lives by interviewing the other half.

As a matter of fact there are dozens of people here who never have written a newspaper or magazine article about the stars, nor started to write a novel or play or short story built around characters of the screen colony.

There even are several screen stars who never have written anything about themselves. However, everyone who has talked or is likely to talk to anyone working in pictures is a potential writer of such things as "My Recollections of So-and-So." And since everyone working in pictures is a potential celebrity, no extra-girl or third-assistant director can be sure that a casual conversation lightly entered into will not later turn out to have been an interview or material for an anecdote in someone's memoirs.

The person just beginning to chamber up the alibi stairway to screen fame this is an exhilarating thought. Seventeen-year-old girls are asked to comment on the Mexican situation, having qualified for such prizes by winning a six-months' contract in the movies. Rising ingenues

DERBY, Ore., Dec. 13.—(Special) It is hard to believe that the valley was under a blanket of fog while we enjoyed clear, beautiful, sunshiny days. Mt. Pitt is white and lovely and a fresh light fall of snow has sprinkled the forests below, so that we have a real Christmas scene heralding the holiday season. The stars are so big and bright and the moon is growing.
