MANY WILLS FOR POINTER MADE IN SIX MONTHS' TIME

The hearing underway before County Judge Alex Sparrow for three days to determine the competency of W. A. Pointer, aged 55 years to handle his own business affairs, drew to a close this afternoon, with the presentation of rebuttal testimony, and several lively hits between Attorneys Enright, Phipps and Koff.

B. E. Harder, president of the First National bank, testified that the making of three different wills by Pointer in a period of six months, was "bad judgment for a man of his years."

Under cross-examination by Attorney Neff, Mr. Harder testified that it might not have been exactly bad judgment, but there were better ways to do it.

The documentary evidence at the hearing shows that between December 1927 and August 1928, Pointer had made three different documents, the first conveying all his estate, amounting to about $22,000, to his daughter, Mrs. Anna C. Nalley, with the proviso that Mrs. and Mrs. J. C. Cass were to receive $1900; that a second paper was drawn when he learned the Nalleys were to be divorced, giving one-half to his daughter and one-half to P. K. Nalley, and $1000 to Cass; and in the third paper he gave one-third each to the Nalleys and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cass.

The bank official was subjected to a number of hypothetical questions bearing on the three documents, and testified that "securing care and comfort in old age" by the best way. He further testified that a revocable clause in the will would help.

During the cross-examination Pointer interrupted and was cautioned by Attorney Phipps, by shaking a finger at the aged man. Pointer shook his finger back at the attorney.

Oris Crawford, cashier of the First National bank, testified that as far as he could determine from his banking relations with Pointer he was capable of handling his own affairs. He was a cautious witness, and admitted "that no banker likes to testify in proceedings."

A. A. Becker, a neighbor of the Nalleys, was also called as a witness. Arguments in the case will be made to the court, it is expected, late today.

The city council will meet tonight to complete its organization under the new administration.

Mayor Phipps will announce the coming tonight and also the appointive officials as was decided upon. It is the general impression that there will be few if any changes in the personnel of the city appointive officers.

The amount of the bond issue to purchase and build the new air field will also be decided at the meeting tonight and the date set for the election, which will no doubt be between March 22 and April 1st.

ROTARIANS FIND 'QUEER' MONEY IN LUNCHEON PLACE

Members of the Rotary club had fun this noon judiciously distributing the money represented by the First National Bank, unregistered checks found at their place, as they entered the dining room at Hotel Medford. The checks ranged all the way from 19 cents, assigned Halyo Rotarian Duke Wellington, to amounts in the million dollar category.

The endorsement of baby hospitals, a local junior college, local park, summer camps for children, struggling newsboys, the community chest and church charities, were among the philanthropic causes which found a place on the lists of the generous hearted Rotarians.

Dr. Ed Shockley suggested building a gymnasium for three business men, and Wilson Walt said he would use his sum to provide an annuity for broken down cornet players. Paul Smith considered bribing the press so that they wouldn't leave his name out of the bachelor columns, which remained reporters present that there are four bachelors in the club instead of three as heretofore stated (and they're all good looking).

C. C. Hoover, who received a check for $100,000, surprised the club by not advocating the further exploitation of bulbous blue grass. He would use $50,000 of this sum, instead for the education of dairymen in the state of Oregon, and the remaining amount in the development of better stock.

SEASON TICKETS FOR BASKETBALL SALE WEDNESDAY

Season basketball tickets will go on sale at Crowson's tomorrow noon and close Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock, according to an announcement made today by the high school. The price of the tickets is $3 and calls for admission to all games played on the home floor.

Tickets for the game Friday night at the armory with the University of Oregon freshmen will go on sale Friday noon at Crowson's and at the same hour Saturday for the game that evening.

Negotiations have been completed with the Salem high school for two games in this city, Friday and Saturday, February 8 and 9. The Salem team will play Ashland at Ashland, Thursday, February 7.

The high school team will scrimmage with the alumni team in the armory tomorrow night at 7 o'clock and the fans are invited to come and see the contest. It will be a regulation length battle, and the high school hopes to get revenge for the drubbing handed them Saturday night.

The University of Oregon freshmen, under the guidance of Spike Leslie, are supposed to be the best yearling team in years at Eugene, and its first string has three Portland high school stars.

AIR MEN ANXIOUS TO SEE CRANDALL

The pilots of the Pacific Air Transport and the attaches of the local airport are awaiting with much interest the time when Henry Crandall, the air pilot in the P. A. T. service, begins his duties in that service, within a week. He will fly a mail plane with the Oakland-Medford division of the Seattle-Los Angeles air mail route along with Art Starbuck and Ralph Verdon.

Reports describe Crandall as a cautious and capable pilot, who performed stunts only when before the camera. He has a record of 1800 flying hours to his credit. He began flying at Rogers field, Los Angeles, years ago, and for several years barnstormed in California, New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma.

During his airplane career with the movies Crandall played in "Luce Time," "Hell in Angels," "Coburn & Kelly in Paris," "Air Circus" and "Hazardous Times." He recently finished the movie camera career for that of an air mail pilot.
