

MEDFORD MAIL TRIBUNE

Daily, Sunday, Weekly... MEDFORD PRINTING CO. 25-27-29 N. Fir St. Phone 75

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS... Official paper of the City of Medford.

Subscription Rates... Daily, with Sunday, year... $7.50

Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry

Of the Geisha girls of Japan, and the Geosia girls of home.

Hobias Duell has returned from the metropolis with a cream colored hat, lined with the inside of a coffin, and which represents an outlay and layout of at least four tier of dry wood, if any.

The season for fresh air fiends is about over, thank goodness! This species desires everybody but themselves pre-cooled and refrigerated, and a stove radiating heat and good cheer, has the same effect on their inner natures as a saloon had upon Carrie Nation.

AND IT'S ILL (SF. Examiner) SALEM, Ore., Jan. 14—Oregon's legitimate convened today in its thirty-fifth session.

The first robin showed up Sunday on the Union Club campus, coming from the balmy south to face the rigors of the winter, and the airguns of kids. He is an early bird, but as yet has got no fish worm.

Several of the Gahnevika are becoming adept at tapping cigarettes on their thumbnails.

Anyone having a burro that brays nights, can sell same to the undersigned, as it is desired to pasture him adjacent to the owner of a hound that bays all night.

NO HASTY CONCLUSION (Lakeview Examiner) With his skull fractured, his chest smashed, his left leg broken, his body a mass of bruises, an unidentified man was found unconscious beside his wrecked auto. It looked very much like an accident to the county officials.

A cold has settled in the eye of a prominent citizen, leaving a red mark about the size of a French heel.

The legislature has been in session two days. If there is anybody in the state who is not tired of their deeds to date, that they should be abolished without further notice, he should be sent to the legislature.

A man wearing down-grey spats, chewing tobacco, duly noted Virgil on one end, was the verdict of the jury.

MUFFLING A BAWL-OUT (Kansas City Star) AFTER this date I am responsible for debts incurred by myself only. C. T. Henson, 916 Armour Blvd.

I HAVE always worked and sold my own bills. Mrs. C. T. Henson, 3629 Highland.

Jim Keene, a filler of the C. Point district, was in Medford. He had the tax situation by the nose of the neck and the seat of the pants, looking for some place to throw it.

THIBOUTA TO A LADY (Emporia, Kan., Gazette) The Frith boys, the Frith social standards touched every member of this butterfly swarm. For Mrs. J. Harvey Frith who probably in her whole life never cured much about the difference between an ace and a two spot, Mrs. Frith knew about youth and always knew when it should get in at night. Also she knew with an understanding heart and an unflinching sense of humor, hence she was a tower of strength in other homes in that neighborhood. Everybody knew that J. Harvey Frith was the town's foremost scholar, that he carried a degree from Oxford and that he read Greek as easily as he read the London Times. That was good to know, but as the neighborhood said: "You come home when the Frith girls come." And 11 o'clock closing for parties was established in that crowd.

Card of Thanks. We wish to thank our many friends for their sympathy and kindness during the illness and death of our dear father and grandfather; also wish to thank the Nevada chapter of the Masonic order and other friends for the beautiful floral offerings; also wish to thank those who furnished the music and the cars, and Rev. Johnston and Rev. Branham for their kindly words of our dear father. To all these we extend our heartfelt thanks. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lees and Family.

Editorial Correspondence

CAIRMEL. Calif.—Jan. 16.—(AP) This attractive spot, the most beautiful on the Pacific coast, made famous by the Carmelite monks and Almer McPherson, is all agog over the fact that two movie companies are at work on Point Lobos—Edwin Carewe with Dolores Del Rio and a company of 49, shooting a super-production of Evangeline, and George O'Brien and a smaller company shooting some story taken from the Saturday Evening Post.

Evangeline is in full swing, and at least 90 percent of the Mexicans and rancheros in this vicinity are getting from $5 a day up as "extras." Dolores is Evangeline and the lead opposite her is taken by a comely young man with delicate features and wavy black hair by the name of Roland Drew. On the shores of Pt. Lobos, they have erected the village of Grand Pres, and Evangeline's extensive farm home, resembling Anne Hathaway's cottage in its thatched roof and curving gables. There are British soldiers in red coats, looking like a detachment of the Mexican army, farmers in three-cornered hats, and wool stockings, and two-wheeled wooden carts, chunky farm houses, and large families of Mexican children.

The principal stunt yesterday was a folk dance led by Dolores Del Rio, dressed by Carewe in his white shining leotards, tan riding boots, and a leather crop. Carewe is said to have Indian blood and looks it. He is a thick set, bull-neck man, with strong rather coarse features, a thick mop of hair, turning gray, and a milk chocolate complexion. He is supposed to be in love with Dolores, and planning to assume the role of bridegroom in the near future. Dolores recently secured a divorce and a few months ago her discarded Mexican husband died in Paris from blood poisoning. His dying wish was to see Dolores, and she sent him a cheering cable, but found it impossible to leave Hollywood. Carewe handled the scene with gloves—very quiet and gentle in his manner, and very complimentary to the principals. A village feast followed the dance, and the extra enjoyed a banquet of real food, including slices of roast pig and beef, steaming nearby on their spit, in another corner of the "set" an old man, without teeth, known as grandpa, squatted against a tree, and told haunting stories to a pack of children gathered in a circle about him. Grandpa lives in Hollywood, and smokes a long-stemmed pipe in the bowl of which smoulders the butt end of a cigar.

The hotel in which we are staying is crowded with movie men from the technical department—choreographers, cameramen, etc. They are rather a rough looking crew, but interesting to talk to. Like most "workers" they have a somewhat contemptuous view of their superior. One of them volunteered that all one needed to make a movie, was make-up, nerve and a good publicity man, judging by their remarks. They think nothing of Roland Drew, but they think Carewe knows his stuff, and Dolores Del Rio is "the body's goal."

We got several "close-ups" of the Dolores. She is very good looking, in spite of the heavy make-up, and besides her beauty, her face has an intelligent, semi-spiritual quality which makes her more convincing as Evangeline, than one would expect. She is staying at the Highlands, rides back and forth in a royal limousine, with a chauffeur and her very moderate looking Mexican maid. In moments of repose her face is rather sad. Perhaps she can't entirely forget Del Rio, who died alone in Paris, calling for her to come.

Beautiful sunny weather down here, only 125 miles from San Francisco but a great change in climate. Carmel has grown amazingly since our last visit, and has a real auto parking problem. Building is now going down the Carmel valley. There always was and still is something amazingly high brow and yet theatrical and snobbish about the place. One can well understand how it appealed to Almer McPherson, who was always an actress first and only an evangelist by the accident of marriage.

There are three large golf courses near here. At Pebble Beach where the course was laid out by H. Chandler Egan, the national amateur will be held this next fall. This will be one of the biggest sporting events ever staged in the west. Hotel accommodations for that period are already at a premium. Chan Egan has a place here, but is now in Los Angeles, where he took part in the last open tournament. He qualified, but failed to "show" in the finals.

We played at Pebble Beach yesterday, and got intimately acquainted with about half a hundred sand traps. It is a sporty and picturesque course, but no place for a "duh." We played with Don Clark, one of our own Medford stars, who is here for two weeks, with Mrs. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Hamill. Don shot a 74 on the first nine, which is about equal to a 54 on the Medford course—some golf. On the short seventh a masher shot to the green, stuck out in the ocean, he seems within six inches of making a hole in one. He got an easy two which is one better than George Von Elm did the last time we saw him win the California championship. R. W. R.

BAKER PLANNING SECRETARY WORK AT EUGENE MEET UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, Jan. 16.—(Special)—Intensive study of chamber of commerce problems peculiar to Oregon will be the main work at the annual school for chamber of commerce secretaries at the University of Oregon, March 12 to 23, it is announced by David E. Haville, dean of the school of business administration. Under the direction of Ted Baker, Medford, who is president of the state association of chamber secretaries, a comprehensive program is already being worked out.

Card of Thanks. We wish to express our deep gratitude and appreciation to the many friends who extended to us their kind sympathy and sent flowers during the time of our recent bereavement. J. H. Von der Helten, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Von der Helten, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Von der Helten, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Von der Helten, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. A. Evanson, and Families.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address for William Brady, in care of this newspaper.

A KING CAN CATCH NO COLD THROUGH HE MAY CATCH CHILL A reader asks if I will not tell in words of one syllable that all may understand, all about the King's illness. Of course, the reader ought to know I do not believe the king took cold by standing bare-headed in the cold rain, on Armistice day or that this exposure brought on the pleurisy. Of course not. I did try to describe the king's illness in a special article recently, an article that was really something of a soap, for I believe my article was published several days in advance of the first of the king's illness and one article about the king's illness that other doctors have contributed to the newspapers since I accepted 'em. But my article contained the customary number of words of six and eight syllables. You see, when we don't know much we just have to use big words, otherwise plain folk may suspect that we don't know what we're talking about.

When I gave out my version of the king's illness the king's physicians had not yet issued a bulletin, but containing a hint of pleurisy, emphysema, bronchitis, a uremic, solved pneumonia, lung abscess or anything definite. So I muffed it, but anyway I beat all other experts into print, and that's the main thing.

I have been anxiously awaiting the flood of frontal, not to say surrectal letters apprising me of the interesting fact that the king got his head wet shortly before he fell ill. I knew this would be thrown up to me by people who would profess to feel considerable amusement at my attempt to explain the strange coincidences. After long and earnest consideration of the contingency I decided that my rejoinder should be sharp, short and unapologetic. Here it is, and I warn anyone who may feel impelled to offer any further argument about it that I demand some plausible explanation for the streptococcus that figures in one of the bulletins given out by the king's physicians. There's a tangible fact, an obstinate fact, the presence of streptococcus in the king's chest. You've got to account for the streptococcus before I will listen to any theories, any guesses, to offer concerning the effect of the wetting of the king's head.

The king is a man admired and beloved by all the world. He is a good man, and quite human. Everybody is happy when the news about his illness seems favorable, and sad when the bulletins suggest another setback. But the king is human, and so I must be careful to take no matter how severe the exposure may be. If the king caught anything on Armistice day with head bared in a drizzle for a considerable time, it wasn't cold, but a respiratory infection from someone around him.

There is no medical authority, no health authority, in the world, who can produce any evidence whatever that any human being is ever made ill (except frostbite) by exposure to cold or wet such as everybody who lives experiences countless times every season.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS I & T. Club Committee Reports Progress. This report has just been filed by a special committee of the Iron and Tea Club: My Dear Dr. Brady: I wish to thank you for your really splendid hair restorer receipt. I came across it in your paper a few weeks ago and I thought "hanged if I won't give it a trial." So I got some coporsas (iron sulphate) and put a piece the size of a kernel of corn in a pint of black tea and began using it on my hair, and behold every gray hair has vanished as though by magic. And the beauty of it is, this tea and iron leaves the hair nice and soft, and not gummy like other dopes, and also it's really quite natural. I am a coach in and gray

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A coroner's jury is investigating the death of Helen Haskew, 48, of Portales, at the New Mexico girl's welfare home, after an injection of "twilight sleep" is said to have been given to six girls who had been captured after an escape from the institution.

Pay Graves, one of the six, charged that they had all been given the injection after they were returned to the home. They were then placed in solitary confinement on a bread and water diet. Other girls who were among the six said that Miss Haskew had seemed in good health when they were captured last Friday, but that all of them were sick and sleepy "after the injection."

The girl was reported to have died of heart failure, but an inquiry into the death was started at the institution of her father, Miss Hertha Lipe, superintendent of the home, testified at the inquest yesterday that the girls were given "twilight sleep" injections at the order of Dr. Evelyn Frisbie, physician at the home, after they had disturbed "the whole institution and it was feared that they might injure themselves."

MUTT AND JEFF—Ima Figured He Was Handed a Compliment THERE WAS NOTHING WRONG ABOUT SENDING MY BROTHER IN HERE TO TRY TO NEGOTIATE A LOAN OF ONE HUNDRED BUCKS, JEFF. BUT THE PRESIDENT OF THAT BANK WONT LOAN IMA ANY JACK. HE'S WORTHLESS LIKE YOURSELF! WELL, LET'S BE ON OUR WAY, GENTLEMEN! I WAS JUST TELLING MUTT HE WAS SILLY TO SEND YOU IN THERE. THAT BANK PRESIDENT IS A HARD-HEARTED BUSINESS MAN! HE AIN'T SO BAD! IN FACT, HE TREATED ME VERY, VERY COURTEOUSLY! SEE, JEFF? YOU MEAN HE LOANED YOU THE ONE HUNDRED IRON MEN, IMA? NO, HE DIDN'T—BUT WHEN I ASKED HIM FOR THE LOAN HE HESITATED OVER A MINUTE!

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address for William Brady, in care of this newspaper.

A KING CAN CATCH NO COLD THROUGH HE MAY CATCH CHILL A reader asks if I will not tell in words of one syllable that all may understand, all about the King's illness. Of course, the reader ought to know I do not believe the king took cold by standing bare-headed in the cold rain, on Armistice day or that this exposure brought on the pleurisy. Of course not. I did try to describe the king's illness in a special article recently, an article that was really something of a soap, for I believe my article was published several days in advance of the first of the king's illness and one article about the king's illness that other doctors have contributed to the newspapers since I accepted 'em. But my article contained the customary number of words of six and eight syllables. You see, when we don't know much we just have to use big words, otherwise plain folk may suspect that we don't know what we're talking about.

When I gave out my version of the king's illness the king's physicians had not yet issued a bulletin, but containing a hint of pleurisy, emphysema, bronchitis, a uremic, solved pneumonia, lung abscess or anything definite. So I muffed it, but anyway I beat all other experts into print, and that's the main thing.

I have been anxiously awaiting the flood of frontal, not to say surrectal letters apprising me of the interesting fact that the king got his head wet shortly before he fell ill. I knew this would be thrown up to me by people who would profess to feel considerable amusement at my attempt to explain the strange coincidences. After long and earnest consideration of the contingency I decided that my rejoinder should be sharp, short and unapologetic. Here it is, and I warn anyone who may feel impelled to offer any further argument about it that I demand some plausible explanation for the streptococcus that figures in one of the bulletins given out by the king's physicians. There's a tangible fact, an obstinate fact, the presence of streptococcus in the king's chest. You've got to account for the streptococcus before I will listen to any theories, any guesses, to offer concerning the effect of the wetting of the king's head.

The king is a man admired and beloved by all the world. He is a good man, and quite human. Everybody is happy when the news about his illness seems favorable, and sad when the bulletins suggest another setback. But the king is human, and so I must be careful to take no matter how severe the exposure may be. If the king caught anything on Armistice day with head bared in a drizzle for a considerable time, it wasn't cold, but a respiratory infection from someone around him.

There is no medical authority, no health authority, in the world, who can produce any evidence whatever that any human being is ever made ill (except frostbite) by exposure to cold or wet such as everybody who lives experiences countless times every season.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS I & T. Club Committee Reports Progress. This report has just been filed by a special committee of the Iron and Tea Club: My Dear Dr. Brady: I wish to thank you for your really splendid hair restorer receipt. I came across it in your paper a few weeks ago and I thought "hanged if I won't give it a trial." So I got some coporsas (iron sulphate) and put a piece the size of a kernel of corn in a pint of black tea and began using it on my hair, and behold every gray hair has vanished as though by magic. And the beauty of it is, this tea and iron leaves the hair nice and soft, and not gummy like other dopes, and also it's really quite natural. I am a coach in and gray

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A coroner's jury is investigating the death of Helen Haskew, 48, of Portales, at the New Mexico girl's welfare home, after an injection of "twilight sleep" is said to have been given to six girls who had been captured after an escape from the institution.

Pay Graves, one of the six, charged that they had all been given the injection after they were returned to the home. They were then placed in solitary confinement on a bread and water diet. Other girls who were among the six said that Miss Haskew had seemed in good health when they were captured last Friday, but that all of them were sick and sleepy "after the injection."

The girl was reported to have died of heart failure, but an inquiry into the death was started at the institution of her father, Miss Hertha Lipe, superintendent of the home, testified at the inquest yesterday that the girls were given "twilight sleep" injections at the order of Dr. Evelyn Frisbie, physician at the home, after they had disturbed "the whole institution and it was feared that they might injure themselves."

MUTT AND JEFF—Ima Figured He Was Handed a Compliment THERE WAS NOTHING WRONG ABOUT SENDING MY BROTHER IN HERE TO TRY TO NEGOTIATE A LOAN OF ONE HUNDRED BUCKS, JEFF. BUT THE PRESIDENT OF THAT BANK WONT LOAN IMA ANY JACK. HE'S WORTHLESS LIKE YOURSELF! WELL, LET'S BE ON OUR WAY, GENTLEMEN! I WAS JUST TELLING MUTT HE WAS SILLY TO SEND YOU IN THERE. THAT BANK PRESIDENT IS A HARD-HEARTED BUSINESS MAN! HE AIN'T SO BAD! IN FACT, HE TREATED ME VERY, VERY COURTEOUSLY! SEE, JEFF? YOU MEAN HE LOANED YOU THE ONE HUNDRED IRON MEN, IMA? NO, HE DIDN'T—BUT WHEN I ASKED HIM FOR THE LOAN HE HESITATED OVER A MINUTE!

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address for William Brady, in care of this newspaper.

A KING CAN CATCH NO COLD THROUGH HE MAY CATCH CHILL A reader asks if I will not tell in words of one syllable that all may understand, all about the King's illness. Of course, the reader ought to know I do not believe the king took cold by standing bare-headed in the cold rain, on Armistice day or that this exposure brought on the pleurisy. Of course not. I did try to describe the king's illness in a special article recently, an article that was really something of a soap, for I believe my article was published several days in advance of the first of the king's illness and one article about the king's illness that other doctors have contributed to the newspapers since I accepted 'em. But my article contained the customary number of words of six and eight syllables. You see, when we don't know much we just have to use big words, otherwise plain folk may suspect that we don't know what we're talking about.

When I gave out my version of the king's illness the king's physicians had not yet issued a bulletin, but containing a hint of pleurisy, emphysema, bronchitis, a uremic, solved pneumonia, lung abscess or anything definite. So I muffed it, but anyway I beat all other experts into print, and that's the main thing.

I have been anxiously awaiting the flood of frontal, not to say surrectal letters apprising me of the interesting fact that the king got his head wet shortly before he fell ill. I knew this would be thrown up to me by people who would profess to feel considerable amusement at my attempt to explain the strange coincidences. After long and earnest consideration of the contingency I decided that my rejoinder should be sharp, short and unapologetic. Here it is, and I warn anyone who may feel impelled to offer any further argument about it that I demand some plausible explanation for the streptococcus that figures in one of the bulletins given out by the king's physicians. There's a tangible fact, an obstinate fact, the presence of streptococcus in the king's chest. You've got to account for the streptococcus before I will listen to any theories, any guesses, to offer concerning the effect of the wetting of the king's head.

The king is a man admired and beloved by all the world. He is a good man, and quite human. Everybody is happy when the news about his illness seems favorable, and sad when the bulletins suggest another setback. But the king is human, and so I must be careful to take no matter how severe the exposure may be. If the king caught anything on Armistice day with head bared in a drizzle for a considerable time, it wasn't cold, but a respiratory infection from someone around him.

There is no medical authority, no health authority, in the world, who can produce any evidence whatever that any human being is ever made ill (except frostbite) by exposure to cold or wet such as everybody who lives experiences countless times every season.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS I & T. Club Committee Reports Progress. This report has just been filed by a special committee of the Iron and Tea Club: My Dear Dr. Brady: I wish to thank you for your really splendid hair restorer receipt. I came across it in your paper a few weeks ago and I thought "hanged if I won't give it a trial." So I got some coporsas (iron sulphate) and put a piece the size of a kernel of corn in a pint of black tea and began using it on my hair, and behold every gray hair has vanished as though by magic. And the beauty of it is, this tea and iron leaves the hair nice and soft, and not gummy like other dopes, and also it's really quite natural. I am a coach in and gray

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A coroner's jury is investigating the death of Helen Haskew, 48, of Portales, at the New Mexico girl's welfare home, after an injection of "twilight sleep" is said to have been given to six girls who had been captured after an escape from the institution.

Pay Graves, one of the six, charged that they had all been given the injection after they were returned to the home. They were then placed in solitary confinement on a bread and water diet. Other girls who were among the six said that Miss Haskew had seemed in good health when they were captured last Friday, but that all of them were sick and sleepy "after the injection."

The girl was reported to have died of heart failure, but an inquiry into the death was started at the institution of her father, Miss Hertha Lipe, superintendent of the home, testified at the inquest yesterday that the girls were given "twilight sleep" injections at the order of Dr. Evelyn Frisbie, physician at the home, after they had disturbed "the whole institution and it was feared that they might injure themselves."

MUTT AND JEFF—Ima Figured He Was Handed a Compliment THERE WAS NOTHING WRONG ABOUT SENDING MY BROTHER IN HERE TO TRY TO NEGOTIATE A LOAN OF ONE HUNDRED BUCKS, JEFF. BUT THE PRESIDENT OF THAT BANK WONT LOAN IMA ANY JACK. HE'S WORTHLESS LIKE YOURSELF! WELL, LET'S BE ON OUR WAY, GENTLEMEN! I WAS JUST TELLING MUTT HE WAS SILLY TO SEND YOU IN THERE. THAT BANK PRESIDENT IS A HARD-HEARTED BUSINESS MAN! HE AIN'T SO BAD! IN FACT, HE TREATED ME VERY, VERY COURTEOUSLY! SEE, JEFF? YOU MEAN HE LOANED YOU THE ONE HUNDRED IRON MEN, IMA? NO, HE DIDN'T—BUT WHEN I ASKED HIM FOR THE LOAN HE HESITATED OVER A MINUTE!

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address for William Brady, in care of this newspaper.

A KING CAN CATCH NO COLD THROUGH HE MAY CATCH CHILL A reader asks if I will not tell in words of one syllable that all may understand, all about the King's illness. Of course, the reader ought to know I do not believe the king took cold by standing bare-headed in the cold rain, on Armistice day or that this exposure brought on the pleurisy. Of course not. I did try to describe the king's illness in a special article recently, an article that was really something of a soap, for I believe my article was published several days in advance of the first of the king's illness and one article about the king's illness that other doctors have contributed to the newspapers since I accepted 'em. But my article contained the customary number of words of six and eight syllables. You see, when we don't know much we just have to use big words, otherwise plain folk may suspect that we don't know what we're talking about.

When I gave out my version of the king's illness the king's physicians had not yet issued a bulletin, but containing a hint of pleurisy, emphysema, bronchitis, a uremic, solved pneumonia, lung abscess or anything definite. So I muffed it, but anyway I beat all other experts into print, and that's the main thing.

I have been anxiously awaiting the flood of frontal, not to say surrectal letters apprising me of the interesting fact that the king got his head wet shortly before he fell ill. I knew this would be thrown up to me by people who would profess to feel considerable amusement at my attempt to explain the strange coincidences. After long and earnest consideration of the contingency I decided that my rejoinder should be sharp, short and unapologetic. Here it is, and I warn anyone who may feel impelled to offer any further argument about it that I demand some plausible explanation for the streptococcus that figures in one of the bulletins given out by the king's physicians. There's a tangible fact, an obstinate fact, the presence of streptococcus in the king's chest. You've got to account for the streptococcus before I will listen to any theories, any guesses, to offer concerning the effect of the wetting of the king's head.

The king is a man admired and beloved by all the world. He is a good man, and quite human. Everybody is happy when the news about his illness seems favorable, and sad when the bulletins suggest another setback. But the king is human, and so I must be careful to take no matter how severe the exposure may be. If the king caught anything on Armistice day with head bared in a drizzle for a considerable time, it wasn't cold, but a respiratory infection from someone around him.

There is no medical authority, no health authority, in the world, who can produce any evidence whatever that any human being is ever made ill (except frostbite) by exposure to cold or wet such as everybody who lives experiences countless times every season.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS I & T. Club Committee Reports Progress. This report has just been filed by a special committee of the Iron and Tea Club: My Dear Dr. Brady: I wish to thank you for your really splendid hair restorer receipt. I came across it in your paper a few weeks ago and I thought "hanged if I won't give it a trial." So I got some coporsas (iron sulphate) and put a piece the size of a kernel of corn in a pint of black tea and began using it on my hair, and behold every gray hair has vanished as though by magic. And the beauty of it is, this tea and iron leaves the hair nice and soft, and not gummy like other dopes, and also it's really quite natural. I am a coach in and gray

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A coroner's jury is investigating the death of Helen Haskew, 48, of Portales, at the New Mexico girl's welfare home, after an injection of "twilight sleep" is said to have been given to six girls who had been captured after an escape from the institution.

Pay Graves, one of the six, charged that they had all been given the injection after they were returned to the home. They were then placed in solitary confinement on a bread and water diet. Other girls who were among the six said that Miss Haskew had seemed in good health when they were captured last Friday, but that all of them were sick and sleepy "after the injection."

The girl was reported to have died of heart failure, but an inquiry into the death was started at the institution of her father, Miss Hertha Lipe, superintendent of the home, testified at the inquest yesterday that the girls were given "twilight sleep" injections at the order of Dr. Evelyn Frisbie, physician at the home, after they had disturbed "the whole institution and it was feared that they might injure themselves."

MUTT AND JEFF—Ima Figured He Was Handed a Compliment THERE WAS NOTHING WRONG ABOUT SENDING MY BROTHER IN HERE TO TRY TO NEGOTIATE A LOAN OF ONE HUNDRED BUCKS, JEFF. BUT THE PRESIDENT OF THAT BANK WONT LOAN IMA ANY JACK. HE'S WORTHLESS LIKE YOURSELF! WELL, LET'S BE ON OUR WAY, GENTLEMEN! I WAS JUST TELLING MUTT HE WAS SILLY TO SEND YOU IN THERE. THAT BANK PRESIDENT IS A HARD-HEARTED BUSINESS MAN! HE AIN'T SO BAD! IN FACT, HE TREATED ME VERY, VERY COURTEOUSLY! SEE, JEFF? YOU MEAN HE LOANED YOU THE ONE HUNDRED IRON MEN, IMA? NO, HE DIDN'T—BUT WHEN I ASKED HIM FOR THE LOAN HE HESITATED OVER A MINUTE!

Protect Children After Influenza

Childs Attacking Weakened System May Lead to Pneumonia

The chief danger in this epidemic is after a flu attack. Then, more than ever, the slightest cold may lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, or a second and more severe case of flu.

Flu nearly always leaves the stomach empty. Internal medication could, therefore, be avoided, as it so often further disturbs the digestion and thus retards recovery.

But if a fresh cold comes don't let the child keep it over night. Just rub Vicks on throat and chest at bedtime. As it is applied especially Vicks will be used freely and often, with no fear of upsetting a delicate stomach. Vicks in two ways at once checks absorption and infection, to check the cold and avoid serious complications. And of course, it is just as good for adults.

Fred Gottfried Amos Turnbow GOTTFRIED & TURNBOW

Expert plumbing, heating and sheet metal repair shop. We specialize on service at reasonable prices. No job too small. 219 N. Grape St. Phone 574

The title to your property may look good—it probably was good once, but is it now? Perhaps it has been impaired by incorrect figures in deeds, misrepresentations, wills wrongly drawn. If you insure the title these or other defects will come to light and can be corrected, and you will be protected permanently.

Jackson County Abstract Co.

121 East Sixth Phone 41

A Sour Stomach In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Offer you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating. This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or field fever signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in eating. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

ONIX POINTEX HOSEY

For women...$1.95

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

INSURANCE First Insurance Agency

A. L. HILL, Manager Phone 105 30 N. Central Medford, Oregon

By BUD FISHER

