PELICANS DEFEAT ASHLAND QUINTET 43-22 SATURDAY

The Klamath Falls high school basketball team unmercifully trounced the Ashland high school Saturday night at Klamath Falls, by the score of 43 to 22. This is the first time in southern Oregon history, that a Klamath school has administered so stinging a defeat, and one of the few times that a valley team has even been beaten, let alone massacred.

The Klamath team took a lead at the first quarter, and were never less than 15 ahead throughout the game. Points were plentiful on both sides, but the Lithians were the chief offenders.

Klamath Falls made quite a holiday out of the game, and the business houses closed early Saturday night, to boost the attendance.

The Klamath Falls team, with this victory under their belts, play the Medford high school here next Friday night, in a southern Oregon high school conference.

Medford has a 39 to 19 victory over Klamath Falls. The preliminary game will be between the Junior high and the Prospect team.

With two defeats at the hands of the Frosh and the Hooks, the Medford team plays Salem at 8 o'clock tonight, and will arrive home tomorrow afternoon.

Defeat by the yearlings of the two state institutions was not unexpected, but great good has come therefrom. The early season cockiness has vanished, and the squad has had all the rough corners knocked off its playing form, in the four hard games.

The team is also behind in its condition, and is being pointed to be in the "pink" just before the annual Ashland contests, February 15 and 16.

Washington Bystander

By Kirke L. Simpson.

WASHINGTON.—Some place in or nearby Washington there doubtless still appears in public on ceremonial occasions among the dark bodied citizenry "a rusted antique and rusty" like the theme of the celebrated basso farowell lament in the opera "La Boheme," but which was once a permanent part of the pomp and dignity of the supreme court of the United States.

This ancient fall-out of decent black, with ornate edges and an impressive flare below the waist line, basic in times now almost lost to memory figured in many an imposing argument before that grave and revered tribunal. It has draped the many forms of many a lawyer who later became famous and wealthy.

To most human exigencies, it was of middle size dimensions. It was a snug fit for most men, but awkward in ample folds about small-boned penders as they stood behind the high desk from which counsel invariably addresses his pleas to the black-robed chief justice and his associates on the supreme bench.

Where Clothes Count.

The court is not so formal now in dress requirements. Yet there is a notable tendency among lawyers of experience with its unwritten as well as its written rules never to appear for argument except clad in formal black untaway, with trousers of striped dark gray and the necessary dark neckwear and tall white collar. Every court functionary, bailiff, marshal, clerk or crier is so garbed and the unwary visitor who dares hang an overcoat over the rail of a vacant bench in front of him will quickly hear the voice of authority muttering a demand that he remove it.

Lawyers do appear in business suits some times, but not very often. It's a matter of courtesy and a sense of the fitness of things rather than rule and the court has come to excuse failure to dress the part of attorneys making their first appearance before it. It has even been known that an accretion from the remote interior has argued minus a necktie. But that is just by way of being custom honored in the breach.

Emergency Wardrobe.

Some years ago the unwritten rule was relentless. To appear in a sack suit might bring rebuke upon the offending pleader, so court attaches hit on the idea of keeping a medium sized fall-out in stock, available to any lawyer who came unwittingly unprepared and could not risk failure to appear when called as he rushed to a haberdasher for emergency services. Collars of assorted sizes and a black tie or two made up the first aid equipment stored in a chest in the clerk's office.

While the sartorial requirements are now more liberal and the stock fall-out has vanished, it may be recalled that hardly a year ago an Oklahoman seeking admission to practice before the supreme court was curtly rebuked and stood aside by Chief Justice Taft because he came before the court in a sack suit, vestless and with coat open, displaying an expanse of expensive shirting.

TRIANGLE DEBATE WILL BE STAGED FEBRUARY SIXTH

The first inter-scholastic debate, which will be a triangular arrangement between Medford, Grants Pass and Ashland, will be staged in the three cities Wednesday, February 6.

The Medford negative team of the local high school, will meet the Ashland affirmative here at the Junior high school auditorium at eight o'clock. At the same time, the Medford affirmative will meet the Grants Pass negative in Grants Pass and the Grants Pass affirmative will meet the Ashland negative in Ashland.

This debate, which will open the interscholastic contests throughout the state, will be free to the public, and local residents are not only cordially invited but urged to attend the performance at the Junior high school auditorium.

The question to be debated will be: Resolved: That the policy of federal subsidies to the states with supervision should be abolished. Members of the Medford negative team will be heard here are: Elmer Mae Wilson and George W. Wines.

The affirmative team which will be heard in Grants Pass are, William Dougherty, Laura Drury and Robert Carter.

The intense rivalry which has always existed between Medford and Ashland high schools, should make the local contest especially interesting.

"The success of debate depends upon the support it gets from the public," said Ralph Bailey, publicity director for the high school. "Because of the value of this activity to the students and to Medford high school itself, it is hoped that not only the parents of the students, but the public in general will support this activity," he said.

Esther Ralston At Rialto Today

In "The Case of Lena Smith," at the Rialto today, Esther Ralston has her actress dramatic opportunity and she grasps it to demonstrate that great dramatic force of which she is capable.

It is a story of mother-love in the Josef von Sternberg manner. It is laid in Vienna and in the nearby countryside. It covers a period of twenty years from 1891 to 1914 and Miss Ralston plays the dual role of a young girl and a mother of forty. James Hall, the popular young leading man, has the chief supporting role and the versatile Fred Kohler has an important part.

"The color, the life, the people of gay Vienna are faithfully represented and the realistic scenes, evidencing a wealth of research in their reproduction, have an interest all their own.

HIGH SCHOOL NOW HAS REGISTRATION OF 800 STUDENTS

Over 100 new students have registered at the senior high school since Friday, bringing the total enrollment for the new semester, beginning today, up to 800, according to a report received from the local high school today.

Registration was held Friday for the new students, so as to give them an opportunity to express their preference for courses and to make their selections with the aid of the faculty advisors, who set aside that time for them. The old students registered today. A complete list of the registration for the new semester will not be printed until the middle of the week.

The junior high school, which also started its new semester today, completed the enrollment of 352 students this morning, 67 of whom were new students.
