

BOULDER BUILDER TAKES RANK WITH GEO. W. GOETHALS

DENVER, Jan. 28.—From the west, where the federal reclamation service was conceived, comes the man who is to take charge of the second largest government water project—the Boulder canyon dam.

RAYMOND F. WALTER

Walter's task calls for the expenditure of $165,000,000 and the construction of a dam higher than most skyscrapers.

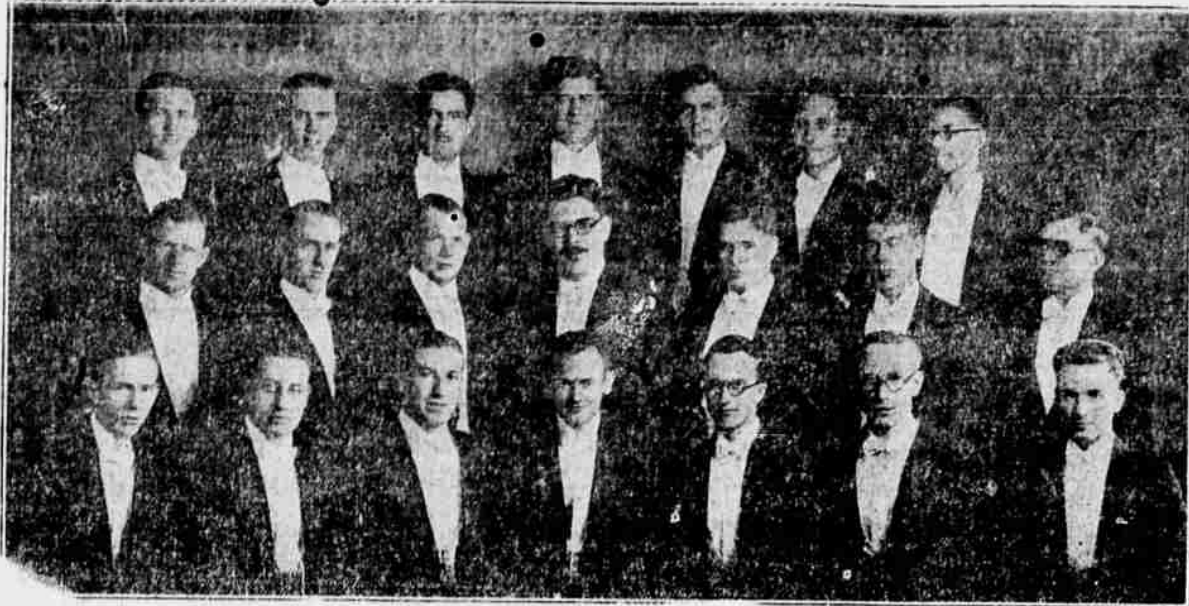

Walter is a modest son of the west. Years of work in the open have given him a ruddy complexion. His voice is quite congruous with his large frame.

Even before he began to study irrigation engineering, he became intensely interested in the problem of water conservation in the west. His father was a newspaper editor at Fort Collins, Colo., and in his office the boy heard ranchmen talk about the difficulty of getting water on their land.

Walter studied engineering at the Colorado Agricultural college, from which he was graduated in 1893. There his first professor of engineering was Elwood Mead, now the director of the United States reclamation service.

For 10 years after graduation Walter was a partner in a firm of engineers who handled most of the irrigation projects in northern Colorado. Then he entered the reclamation service. His first assignment—a $150 a month job—was on the Belle Fourche project in the Black Hills of South Dakota, where he spent five years. Later he was in charge of construction of the Pathfinder dam in Idaho.

No construction can be done at Boulder dam, he points out, until contracts for the sale of power and water have been made at prices that will pay for the dam within 50 years.

The craftsman pro, considered the state's winter open tournament, started with a new world record, a new Texas open record, two course records, and two first prizes totaling $2000.

Melhorn collected the major prize, $1500 in successfully defending his title in the Texas open here yesterday with 277 strokes.

Friday this group of cowboys struggled through a blizzard and drifted snow, driving a herd of horses ahead of them, to get across to a hospital here for an operation for acute appendicitis.

At a luncheon meeting of the Rocky River Ministerial association in the First Methodist church at noon today, Bishop Titus Lowe of Portland, Oregon, was the honor guest.

Following the luncheon, Bishop Lowe addressed the ministers of the valley churches on the theme "Watchman, What of the Night?"

His observations covered the period since the world war and the needs of the fortunes of the Kingdom of God throughout the world.

Bishop Lowe's address was most stimulating to the church workers, who heard him, and gave them a new confidence in the spiritual forces with which they work.

After an absence of three weeks, Mr. Buchler returned home Sunday and although he says they had a very enjoyable trip he is glad to get back to "baby-south-ern Oregon."

STORK IS VISITOR AT FRENCH HOME OF NANCY MILLER

PARIS, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Maharajah Devi Sharmista Holkar, who was Nancy Ann Miller of Seattle, gave birth to a girl last Saturday night.

Only a few close friends knew of the event, although a report that the Maharajah expected a child, was circulated last November.

The Maharajah and Maharani had hoped the child would be a boy, but there was no lack of joy at the chateau and great relief at the good health of the mother and baby.

PROVINCIAL POLICE MARSHAL FORCES IN WAR ON SECT

NELSON, B. C., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Battle lines were being drawn today for a war-torn province of British Columbia.

A force of provincial police, who announced last night that they had the situation "well in hand," were breaking into the rebellious district today.

Meanwhile from Grand Forks come news that a steady stream of "shock troops" were coming into the colony to support the sect's challenge to officers of the crown.

Hostilities opened when two police attempted to arrest three members of the radical wing who were accused of driving Doukhobor children from five Doukhobor schools in the vicinity of Nelson.

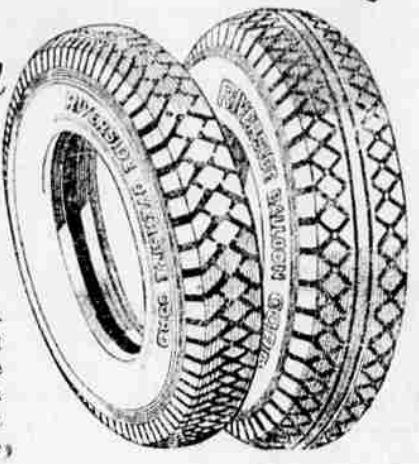

Following the luncheon, Bishop Lowe addressed the ministers of the valley churches on the theme "Watchman, What of the Night?"

His observations covered the period since the world war and the needs of the fortunes of the Kingdom of God throughout the world.

COTTONWOOD, Ida., Jan. 28.—(AP)—A small band of cowboys and stockmen pushed their way back home through 20-foot snowdrifts, confident today that Narcie Aram, 11-year-old daughter of their friend, Jim Aram, would recover her health.
