Ye Smudge Pot
By Arthur Perry
The flu epidemic is over, and the legislature half over.

There have been no captures over the late snow in these parts, an snow on the floor of the valley is a poor grade.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILDREN
A New Jersey correspondent contributes this item:
Dear Dr. Brady:—I believe your articles in the paper in which you give full instructions in artificial respiration for the resuscitation of victims of asphyxiation and other asphyxial conditions.

A Late Beginning
Kindly mention books or pamphlets a mother may give her daughter, age 12, about life. (Mrs. P. H. W.)
Ans.—"Your Daughter's Mother" by Ruth Kitchell Gardner, published by the American Social Hygiene Association, New York, at a price I forget (perhaps a quarter). "The Wonderful Story of Life" is published by the U. S. Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., at a nickel. The latter is rather for little children. It is better to begin their education when they begin to ask questions. It is a great mistake for a parent to give a false answer or try to dodge the questions of a child.

What No Chaperon
I write about a matter of great importance to me, though you may consider it a trifle. So far this winter I have worn no hat. Another winter I have worn a hat. I am 35 and wear silk stockings and silk under the year around, which the neighbors think is a great help for me. This winter and I am always comfortable. (Madeline C.)
Ans.—Let the neighbors write to everybody's column but ask mother to write to me. I'll tell her it is all right. (Copyright, John F. Dille Co.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

One 14-year-old boy wants to play football. Is it likely to cause hunchback or anything? (H. J. K.)
Ans.—Not particularly. I should advise you to forbid the boy to play football until he enters college or has graduated from high school, at least. Let him play for short periods, however, but let him and general gymnastics. The football is a man's game and, in my judgment, always endangers the physical welfare of the undeveloped youngster.

It is Hard on the Liver
I am sick and have, as doctors say, alcoholic cirrhosis of the liver. I would like to know if there is any cure for this sickness, and if so, what the cure might be. (A. M. B.)
Ans.—I know of no cure. If you still indulge in alcohol nothing can be done for you. If you have been able to give it up absolutely and permanently, good medical care will prolong your life several years.

Review of Current Literature of Medford

A Guidepost to the Best in Late Books As Selected by County Librarian Miss Fay Woolsey for Reaction of Local Readers.

The popularity of the book review feature started last week in the Mail Tribune, and to continue as a weekly feature, has been evidenced in a number of responses over the telephone and by word of mouth, which have come into the office during the week.
The Mail Tribune invites five different local readers to contribute a review of books that are included on Miss Fay Woolsey's list of late literature at the Medford library. The reviews are necessarily limited to 200 words, and should be handed in not later than the Thursday noon preceding the Friday upon which they are to appear.

Ghond the Hunter
By Dhun Gopal Mukerji; E. P. Dutton. Reviewed by A. C. Allen.
The glamour of India, the romance of the jungle and the thrill of big-game hunting is conjured by the title and the author's name. The book, however, is the narrative of an editorial requirements for a juvenile. The title, "Ghond the Hunter," is a misnomer as far as this volume is concerned.
It is a typical "gift book"—one of those books, which many young people will receive as a gift, but which will scarcely be read. It will be selected by many adults who like Mukerji. It may interest the unusual youth, but it will scarcely hold the interest of a boy scout, a camp-fire girl or the average young American.

Swan Song—(Galsworthy.) Reviewed by Ted Baker.
Tracing the actions and reactions of a family over a period of nearly a century, as John Galsworthy has done in "The Forsyte Saga" and "Swan Song," is no small accomplishment, especially if the author attempts to weave into the plot the tale, the political and economic trends of the times.
"Swan Song" is a novel written in a faster tempo than is usually found in Galsworthy's writings, and depicts in addition to the conclusion of the history of the Forsyte family, the political and economic conditions of England. The mental attitude of the typical upper middle class mind is strikingly brought out through the expressions of the characters of the story. Strikes, plots, and the actions of parliament in dealing with England's problems are lightly sketched by the author, and the entire tale is told in a rapid, unobtrusive, and trend toward increasing speed in thought as well as in action.
