FORMER RESIDENT OF SAMS VALLEY GRAVELY ILL IN LONG BEACH

Dennis P. Duggan of Sams Valley received the sad news today from his brother Charles Duggan of 5525 Lemon avenue, Long Beach, California that his wife, Ethel Duggan, who had burned one of her fingers some time ago and got infection in it, while decorating with flowers at Christmas, is seriously ill.

Mrs. Duggan had the flu, which left her weak, and after the infection had been controlled and she was able to sit up a little, there was a setback. Mrs. Duggan was taken to St. Mary's hospital at Long Beach where she was operated on. She stood the operation well, but was very weak, and the doctors had to resort to blood transfusion. The doctors, Mr. Duggan stated, give no hope.

Mrs. Duggan was formerly Miss Ethel Marsh of Sams Valley and has many friends here who dearly loved and respected her.

GRANTS PASS BANKER TAKES SKINNER'S CAR

Sam H. Baker, cashier of the Grants Pass and Josephine bank, was mighty close to arrest as an automobile thief last night. He is thankful this morning that he didn't decide to take an automobile trip at about 5:30 last night.

Yesterday afternoon J. J. Skinner, of Medford parked his automobile on a downtown street, not far from the place where Mr. Baker had left his machine. The cars are just alike and when Mr. Baker went home he took the wrong one. Mr. Skinner looked for his car. It was missing and a call was sent to the police. The city officers, traffic officer and sheriff's office searched, but none thought of looking in a bank official's place for it.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker later drove to town and were stopped by the traffic officer who identified the machine. The error was explained and Mr. Skinner's car was returned.—Grants Pass Courier.

Astoria Has Robbery.

ASTORIA, Ore., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Police and the sheriff's office here today were searching for the robber who late yesterday escaped with $7,200 in cash and currency from the offices here of the Astoria stevedoring company. MRS. ELLERMEIER SAYS NOT GUILTY OF SHOPLIFTING

"I am, and shall continue to maintain, that I am innocent. The officers claim they have a logical case again me. I can see their side of it, and I don't blame them." Thus spoke Mrs. George Ellermeier, gentle-voiced, gray-haired woman who with her husband is being held at the county jail on the charge of petty thievery, having been apprehended at the Groceteria yesterday afternoon.

Over in the back room of the police station sat Mrs. Ellermeier's trunk, half emptied of its miscellaneous contents — trinkets of all sorts, several large pieces of folded green ward goods, ropes of imitation pearls, cheap furs, unopened bottles of perfumes, several pairs of unworn silk and wool stockings, an ostrich skin bridge set bearing the price mark of $6.50 inside it, and a quantity of other pieces of merchandise, some of which had never been used.

Officers at the police station remarked humorously that now they had taken that much of the contents out, they couldn't begin to get it all back.

"Men are notoriously poor trunk-packers," laughed the gray-haired woman, when told of it. "Those things have been accumulated by me for years and years," she said, and explained some of them—among others the unused stockings, which she said she purchased following the recommendation of her physician to protect herself from rheumatism.

The woman was outwardly calm over the situation. She neither bid for sympathy nor assumed an air of confident bravado. She was asked where her real home was.

"This is as much my home as any place. We go where we can find work. We've been in Medford since before Christmas." She said that she had worked at anything she could get.

"My husband?" He couldn't find anything to do all winter—he tried awfully hard, too," she answered defensively to a question. "Yes, we both lived on what I could earn.

"We were married last May, in Nevada," she said. "I don't know what the future holds for us. This arrest was a strange occurrence. I've never been suspected of any wrongdoing before. But I don't blame the officers. A person's acts are often misunderstood." And the women, who spoke in a very low voice, seemed very far from breaking down.

INTEREST KEEN IN WHEREABOUTS OF MRS. M'PHERSON

The whereabouts of Aimee Semple McPherson, noted evangelist, evidently caused many local residents concern, judging from the number of phone calls and inquiries which poured into the office of the Mail Tribune throughout the morning.

"What's the latest dope on Aimee?" inquired anxious voices over the wire.

"Have you found Aimee yet?" reporters were asked as they made the rounds of the business section.

"Where can she be?" mumbled some when only a scant amount of information was offered.

Some wagered that she slipped thru Medford by motor. Others ventured a guess that she was hiding at Ashland, prompted in their deduction, no doubt, by the memory that the red-haired evangelist held a large meeting that city last year.

In the meantime, the Mail Tribune kept in constant touch with the airport and the Southern Pacific, in addition to sending queries out over Associated Press. Finally at 10:30 they were able to give out the authentic information that Mrs. McPherson had taken the Cascade line thru Klamath Falls.

The evangelist had kept the means of her departure from San Francisco a dark secret, so as not to be bothered on her trip to Vancouver.

L. J. UPP OBTAINS CORNER PROPERTY RIVERSIDE-NINTH

One of the largest real estate transactions of this year was the consummation of a sale of the Eleanor F. Maule property located at the corner of Riverside and 8th street, directly north of the location for the proposed Firestone Tire and Rubber company building. The purchaser of the property is L. J. Upp, formerly of Dodge City, Kansas, the consideration being approximately $15,000, and the sale having been consummated through the Charles A. Wing Agency, Inc.

Mr. Upp, the new owner of the property, intends to lease the corner to one of the major oil companies, and negotiations are now under way for the leasing of this property under long term lease. The corner is considered one of the most valuable remaining lots close in on the Pacific Highway.

There has been considerable activity in South Riverside and South Central properties during the last few months, people realizing the desirability of properties on these streets.

The Charles A. Wing Agency, Inc., also reports the sale of the A. R. Mason property on South Holly to L. J. Holbrook and the sale of the L. J. Holbrook property to A. R. Mason, who sold same to the Wing agency.

SCHOOL SAVINGS PLAN IS ADOPTED IN CENTRAL POINT

CENTRAL POINT, Ore., Feb. 2.—(Special)—The school savings or national educational thrift plan has been adopted by the Central Point schools and will be put into operation a few days. This is the same school savings plan being used by the Medford schools and by hundreds of other schools throughout the United States.

Membership in this national savings group has been made possible through the active co-operation of the Central Point State bank and its cashier, Theo. P. Tollefson. The schools of Gold Hill and Sams Valley and of the nearby rural districts will join with Central Point in this plan. The Central Point bank will be the depository for all funds and will pay the usual savings account interest on all deposits.

Briefly the plan, when put in operation, will be as follows: One day a week will be designated as bank day and on this day each child who can do so will make a deposit. In the grades the deposits will be handled by the teachers; in the high school by student cashiers. Using the plan which has been successfully worked out in hundreds of other schools the actual time for handling deposits will not exceed 10 minutes.

Throughout the year the big point of the whole plan will be for every child to save something every week. The amount saved is to receive the least consideration. Whether a child makes a small deposit or a large one does not matter in considering the benefits of the plan. The big thing desired is that the child shall establish a habit of saving. The child who puts in a very small amount every week is to be ranked much higher than the child who puts in a big amount occasionally. Teachers and parents will be urged to work together in keeping this point uppermost for this year. Children are not to be asked "How much did you save?" but, rather, "Did you save something this week?"

Parents whose children have savings accounts under other plans are urged to have the children take part in the school savings plan. It is a fine encouragement to other children. Children love to do things together and those who already have the habit of saving can help others to get the habit.

The honor roll, consisting of those students in the high school who have no grade below a B, is as follows for the third six weeks of the first semester.

COUPLE ARRESTED FOR SHOP-LIFTING, HAVE MUCH LOOT

Accused of petty thievery and shop-lifting, Mr. and Mrs. George Ellermeier of West Main street were being held by authorities today, following their arrest last evening by the police. To substantiate the accusations, the police have a large trunkful of alleged stolen goods, part of which they claim was taken from local establishments.

However, the couple declare the entire amount of goods was purchased in Portland and Oakland and was brought with them when they arrived in Medford a short time ago. Offsetting their claims, several proprietors of local establishments identified small bottles of perfume, lace goods, skin chains, flash-lights, tow rope and other articles at the police station this forenoon.

The woman was apprehended at the Groceteria and her husband was taken into custody a short time later by the police, who upon searching their apartment, found the trunk, filled with a surprising variety of goods ranging from watches to handkerchiefs and dress goods, all of which will be held at the station until some disposition has been made of the case. The man and woman are both over 50 years of age and were married not over a year ago, judging from letters found in their personal effects.
