

Local and Personal

The canning and dairying industries of Jackson county flourish prominently in the February number of "Oregon Business," the monthly journal of the state chamber of commerce, with a lengthy description of the local canning industry by Ralph E. Kouszer, president of the Buckley Canning company, and of the dairy industry by County Agent R. G. Fowler. Each story is very interesting and full of valuable data, and is well illustrated.

BAIL MONEY FLOODS POLICE CLERK AFTER ROSE CITY ARRESTS

The sum, he said, represented the largest amount taken in by police during the past five years. Most of the money was posted in cases resulting from the wholesale raids conducted Saturday night by city police, state and federal officers under the supervision of the immigration department here.
Headquarters reported this morning that professional bondsmen fairly fought for front position at the bail window Saturday night and yesterday.
Officers who supervised the raids said it had taken them at least three months to obtain evidence for obtaining warrants on persons arrested and places raided.

BROWN STICKERS FOR PARK ENTRY

The permit stickers for entrance to Crater National park this coming season, as annually, are a different color, but are of the same design and contain the same reading matter as last year, and the entrance fee for cars remains the same, $1 per car, good for all season no matter how many times the car enters the park.
The only difference in the stickers for this year is that they are in brown colored trimmings, with the same picture of a big bear on an overhanging cliff surrounded with the inscription, "Crater Lake National Park, 1929." The trimmings of last year's stickers were green in color.
The reason for this annual change in colors and year is to prevent any car entering the park on a last year's sticker.
