

FOURTEEN SPROUT BABY ANTLERS AT ELKS' INITIATION

The huge membership of the Elks lodge was still further augmented last night by the initiation of fourteen candidates, who are still wandering around in bewildered condition today. They appeared at the Elks temple building all slicked up very early last evening for the ceremonial, in their eagerness not to miss anything, a needless fear, according to all reports today that got everything the generous hearted "brothers" had.

While the new baby Elks are around town today with chests puffed and fraternally greeted by other members of the lodge they meet, they will never be the same as before last night's initiation. In fact one of them is doomed to lead a dog's life the rest of his days.

The hundreds of members of the lodge are proud of the new ones taken in last night, not only because of their general cuteness as a class, but because of their dexterity in dodging and other unexpected athletic stunts.

Three of them showed wonderful celerity, especially in arising from their seats, and an extra-ordinary one of the three did an astonishing acrobatic nose dive to the floor. The paper roll chase of candidates was also electrifying to the large fraternal audience.

Following the initiation all the older Elks led the new ones down into the temple basement where all filled up with coffee, limburger cheese, pickles and other choiceainties.

The fourteen new baby Elks of last night's doings are the following: R. Cole Holmes, W. M. Clemenson, John H. Goswick, Leland S. Brophy, Donald Hutchinson, Harold McCrady, Oscar W. Dunford, Ernest Rostel, William W. Proudy, Harold Woods, Opie H. Stafford, Oscar H. Vann, Lee E. Watson, Ray Tucker.

OREGON EDITORS LISTEN TO TALK OF WORK PHASES

REGINE, Ore., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Oregon editors put in a full day today listening to instructive talks, discussing various phases of the newspaper business and adding recreation by attending basketball games, luncheons and banquets.

High lights today were the discussions by George Putnam of the Salem, Ore., Capital Journal; George F. Cornwall, of the Timberman; Lester Adams of the Portland Telegram; O. L. Price of the Oregonian; L. D. Felsheim of the Bendon Western World and George Cheney of the Enterprise Record-Chief.

During the afternoon C. J. Gillette of the Forest Grove News-Times; W. W. R. May of the Oregonian; Chester Dimond, of the Newberg Graphic; W. Verne McKinney of the Hillsboro Argus; Gordon Law of the Oregon Journal; Jack Bladine of the McMinnville Telephone Register led discussions in advertising sales and general publishing progress.

The evening session will be devoted to a banquet with E. W. Allen, toastmaster and R. W. Montgomery of Portland speaker. Dean Vernon McKeanze of the University of Washington school of Journalism will speak.

A resolution favoring the exchange of cost data and making an annual event of the exclusive meeting of the editors of daily newspapers, inaugurated this year by E. R. Appleby of La Grange was adopted yesterday.

WASHINGTON WAS FIRST TO GRANT BALLOON PERMIT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—George Washington while he was the nation's first president issued an order to permit the first balloon flight to be made in the United States.

This was disclosed today by Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America, who said he found the authorization among Washington's documents. The authorization was granted by Washington, Woodhouse said, to J. P. Blanchard, a French aeronaut, who made at Philadelphia, then the national capital, the first balloon ascension in America on January 9, 1793.

President Washington was present at the ascension. In his authorization, according to Woodhouse, Washington asked the American citizens to honor Blanchard for his "efforts to establish and advance an art in order to make it useful to mankind in general."

DOUGLAS BROCCOLI UNHURT BY COLD

ROSEBURG, Ore., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Douglas county's broccoli crop, thought to be a complete loss as a result of recent severe weather, has suffered less than 10 per cent damage from frost, according to E. A. Petty, federal inspector, who has just completed a thorough investigation in that county.

Despite the fact that the crop was subjected to the most prolonged cold spell experienced in 30 years, the crop has come through with surprisingly little injury, the inspector said.

Gold Hill Man Added Ocean Trip On Ice Cake to Alaska Experience, Sought Warmer Climate After Rescue

The experiences of Frank H. Andrews, Gold Hill resident, in the Klondike country, would almost rival those of Robinson Crusoe. Employed from 1897 to 1913 for a number of famous mining companies, including the Fleming Mining Co. and the Oakland Syndicate, Mr. Andrews covered most of the big mines in that country during those early days.

Juneau, Cordova, Valdez, Anchorage, Catlachan, Lautache! These were a few of the points he made with his dog team. It was when he was with Capt. Johnson that he made a sensational strike, in the interior, and on an eight hour shift, 320 pounds of gold were taken out. Approximately $12,992.90 was taken out in 15 days.

Coming down the coast from Point Barrow, a northern supply point, Mr. Andrews was headed toward Nome with his seven dog team, when he was caught on a massive ice floe. They were carried out two miles to sea, when he discovered the hopelessness of his predicament. He threw his dogs into the ocean, bid farewell to his sled and other belongings, and swam from floe to floe, until after many long hours he struck land.

Exhausted and almost frozen to death, he made his way to an Eskimo hut where he remained for two days until he recuperated. The native and a companion took him to One-Prince-of-Wales, where after another attempt to head for Nome, he was again caught in ice floes and carried to the Siberian coast. He made a third attempt and was again carried back to Siberia.

Finally, thru sheer persistence and grit, he fought his way back to Nome, where he took the boat soon afterwards for Seattle. Instead of remaining in the northern state, he headed immediately for the opposite extreme—Arizona, where he entered business and remained for several years. Mr. Andrews settled in Jackson county seven or eight years ago and claims he is here to stay.

FLAGS FLY TODAY FOR WASHINGTON

There was no general formal celebration of Washington's birthday today beyond the flying of flags from the curbs in the business section and from the tops of public buildings and homes, the closing of federal, county and city offices, banks and a few other places of business, and this afternoon being a half holiday in the public schools following appropriate observance programs in the various buildings.

There will be quite a number of social affairs tonight—private, semi-public and public—in celebration of the day, including dances.

The postoffice was closed all day, there were no carrier deliveries, and, despite the fact that business was conducted as usual, a general holiday feeling prevailed.
