ENFORCEMENT OF DANCE HALL BILL WILL BE SEVERE

The senate bill No. 78, already passed by the senate and house, is signed by Governor L. J. Patterson and goes into effect November 29, or possibly earlier. It will be rigidly put into use in Jackson county, said Sheriff Ralph Jennings, who is the father of the bill, aimed to close dance halls which have been open ever since. This legislation gives an added definition for a public dance and is intended only as an amendment to the dance bill passed some time ago, stipulating all public dances on Saturday night to end at midnight.

The old bill did not give county authorities power to close dances over midnight in small incorporated towns, which permitted dancing until the early morning hours, and, while against the state law, the dances were held without fear of molestation, although by authorities regarded as sore spots in the cause of law enforcement, as they obtained moonshine as a rule flowed freely and vice was often rampant. One of the main objections, officers found, at the "all night" dances was the attendance of young girls of tender years, sometimes as young as 12 or 13 years, and a rule around 16 years of age. One of the reasons expected to be derived from the bill is the protection of these young girls, many of whom attend the dances unchaperoned.

As soon as the bill is put into effect no dance in Jackson county will operate after midnight Saturday, the state law reading that dancing will be prohibited between the hours of 12 and 6 a. m. on Sunday mornings. Sheriff Jennings will take special effort to see the law enforced, he declares.

The bill, as passed last week, hits small towns of 500 population and under and places the regulation of their public dances in the hands of the county court.

CRUCIAL GAME OF 'JULIA'S CHANCES' SCHEDULE PLAYED ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The deciding game of the Ashland-Medford high school basketball series will be played at the Armory tomorrow night. If Medford wins, they clinch the district championship. The final game of the series will be played at Ashland Saturday night.

The Ashland team, enthused by victories over Grants Pass and Klamath Falls last week, are coming here for their last game of the season. The unmerciful whippings landed them in the first game have nettled them no little bit.

Klamath Falls was highly put out by the defeat handed them last Saturday. They claim they were crippled by decisions that removed from the field of action two of their best players. One guard was eliminated in a minute on four personal fouls, which is going some.

It now looks like Washington high of Portland would win the city championship and go to the county. They defeated Lincoln high last Tuesday and the two teams are tied for first place. The Salem team defeated Umpqua Tuesday evening without much trouble. Chemawa was expected to give Salem a struggle. The Capitol City team has a game to play with McMinnville, before its title is clear, but as they defeat the challengers earlier in the season, any upset is improbable.

HOLIDAY SYMBOL ROBBING VALLEY OF TREE GROWTH

Mistletoe—that symbol of so much touching affection around and about Christmas time—is a nuisance, and should be discouraged, according to T. E. Daniels, local sportsman. If the point isn't yet clear, what Mr. Daniels means is that the mistletoe should be discouraged—not necessarily the affection—that is, if one feels that way about it.

The local insurance man is not moved by any feeling of tenderness toward the beautiful clusters of mistletoe, clinging so desperately to the branches of the large oak trees throughout Jackson county. In fact, his mind entirely overlooks the holiday significance as well as the fact that this plant was held in veneration by the ancient druids and by poets of all ages.

What he sees in the heartless, parasitical nature of the growth, destined to sap the hearty oak trees in Jackson county of all their vitality, and subsequently rob the valley of one of its most prized and beautiful attractions.

That some organized effort, through the Chamber of Commerce or other civic groups, should be made to clean out this growth, wherever it is the large oak trees throughout the county, is the belief of Mr. Daniels.

Screen Life in Hollywood

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—Waves of sound and dialog zig-zagging through the screen ether here have had their staggering effects on the humblest of "extras" as well as on those in once secure positions of silent film prowess.

End of the season inactivity in the studios, this year is augmented by the talkie-sound craze, and jobs for the thousands of extras who subsist wholly or partially as background satellites for the upper luminaries of the film heavens are far from plentiful.

The Central Casting company, through which extras are selected for the various producing companies as needed from day to day, constitutes for the most of screen aspirants the only gateway, however severe and unyielding of organization, to the studios. The organization, with approximately 11,000 men and women of all "types" and talents on its register, has closed its books to new names for some time to come, perhaps for months, unless anticipated greater production gets under way, with some stages being rushed to completion sooner than expected.

This organization continues busy, however, with its routine task of meeting whatever needs directors have, and answering the hundreds of telephone calls daily from restless extras hopeful of work. Probably no studio announcement would bring more joy to the rank and file than that another spectacle such as "Ben Hur," with its mob scenes and great crowds, was projected.

She Knows It All
Few in Hollywood know more of the discouraging lot of those who would crash to screen glory via the "extra route" than Miss Merian L. Mel, director of the women's division of the company.

In her position she comes in contact with the disappointments and heartaches, the exaltations and the triumphs which are part of the picture mill's daily grind. Three years of such contacts have not diminished her enthusiasm for the work.

It is expected that the grand jury will be in session until late Saturday.
