Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry

Some of the womenfolk are cleaning house, and some will wait until they return from the annual transcontinental auto trip, but before the fall term of school starts, there are two requisites to housecleaning, towl: the wife wraps a towel around her head, and the husband beats on a carpet with a broomhandle until the broomhandle is a toothpick.

"Some legislation enacted by the present session has been far-fetched"—(Salem Statesman). Furthermore, some of the legislation was not fetched far enough.

A number of new golf addlets have been reported, the more violent ones getting up at seven o'clock on a Sunday morning.

ABOUT RIGHT

(Detroit News)

Youth buys a decrepit motor car. No insurance is taken out and the car is driven recklessly. Because the car isn't worth anything its owner doesn't particularly care what happens. He may even court collision in the hope of collecting from the other fellow. But if he hits another car or runs down a pedestrian nothing can be collected from him. He has nothing, and nothing from nothing leaves nothing.

The only kerosene lamp in use west of the Cascades exploded last Wednesday and ruined the kitchen wallpaper.

The legislature did not visit the penitentiary in a body, as expected. This was good judgment, as some inmate taxpayer would have closed the gate.

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—(P)—Nathaniel Ward celebrated his 100th year on this earth by spanking his son Frank, 69, here today.—(Press Dispatch). This beats announcing that his long life was due to eating lots of potatoes, and never using tobacco.

There was considerable monkey business going on at Jim Grievie's hangout on the Sabbath, about 100 head of people journeying thither to watch the antics of the Simian, and the hired man straightened out a piece of stovepipe that had fallen on his head. All efforts of Fred Wahl, seated on a stone step, to start a bitter argument over the evolution theory failed. Mr. Wahl, who was in fine humor, would greet every new arrival with the remark: "Come and see your uncle!" The monkey was busy removing fleas from a white-haired dog that needed shearing. A nice old lady predicted that Mr. Wahl would catch cold squatting on the cold stone step. The monkey is very sociable and will go into spectators' pockets, ostensibly after peanuts. He removed 85c from the writer's vest pocket, and gave it back, as the Prospector bonifacio was in the store fixing a Coca-Cola for a schoolma'am. He gives promise of being the cleverest pickpocket in southern Oregon as the writer was not aware of the burglary, and took the 85 cents while under the impression that it had been taken from a prosperous-looking farmer from the Central Point area. The monkey has pulled the tails out of every rooster on the place.

ROMANCE

The idea of a swain serenading his lady beneath her window at night still appeals to the romantically minded, but apparently it does not work so well.

The other night, where there was a bright moon, a youth showed up beneath his sweetheart's window and began serenading the latest love ballad in his best lyrical tenor to the staccato accompaniment of a ukulele.

But his efforts failed to bring the young woman to her window, as they should have done according to the best romantic precedent. Being a modern young woman, she probably was out with two other fellows.

But this Romeo, despite his sentimentalism, was a 1928 model go-getter himself, and when the lady failed to respond on the third encore he picked up a stone and tossed it at the lattice. His aim was not much better than his music, however, for instead of striking the sill, as he planned, it went right through, and broken glass tinkled down about him.

A second later the head of his sweetheart's irate ma appeared in the aperture and gave him a dressing-down. Then she called a policeman and had him arrested for disturbing the peace. But the magistrate, having been young once himself, let him off with the admonition to sing to her over the telephone next time, that being much safer.—(Baltimore Sun).

Editorial Correspondence

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 2.—(P)—Monday is an important day for Uncle Sam. For it marks the retirement and inauguration of two Presidents, entirely unlike any other Presidents in the history of this country.

There has never been there probably will be, another Calvin Coolidge. President Hoover is as different from him as black is from white, and yet, he too, represents a character and a type, that has never before occupied the White House.

Silent Cal! That is the title that will stick to our retiring President. Yet it is a very imperfect characterization. When the state papers and public addresses of President Coolidge are compiled, the verbal yardage will compare very well with that of any other chief executive in this generation.

The title applies to President Coolidge's personal and unofficial, rather than his official life. In social and informal intercourse, he was a man of few words. The most dramatic incident of his administration, his refusal to accept a second nomination, was compressed in one brief sentence; and in spite of the tremendous pressure brought upon him he refused to elaborate upon that somewhat cryptic utterance, in the slightest particular.

But when the time came for the President to speak, either to the Congress or to the people of this country and the world, he became not only articulate, but at times positively fluent. He refused to spend words as he refused to spend money, on himself, but when it came to his country, and his duties as the President of that country, he met her minced words, nor hoarded them.

"Silent Cal!" sticks and promises to endure, because it figuratively, rather than literally, epitomizes the man. He declares the supreme achievement of his administration has been minding his own business. That is true, and is only another way of saying that his administration will be notable not so much for what he has done, as for what he has refused to do. His achievements were negative, rather than positive. Not once has he seized the wheel and stepped on the throttle; he has been content to let others do the driving, while he attended exclusively to the business of putting on the brakes. When the history of this epoch is written, President Coolidge's claim to fame will rest not upon the legislation he secured, but the legislation he defeated. By the wise and courageous use of the veto will he be remembered—vetoes that prevented extravagance, vetoes that prevented the enactment of half-baked legislation.

And yet to dismiss President Coolidge, as so many of his high-brow critics have, as merely a President by accident, a colorless mediocrity who, but for the lucky chance of unprecedented prosperity, would never have "made the grade," is both unfair and unintelligent.

True, national prosperity has been a tremendous help—probably greater than most people realize. And in tracing the Coolidge career, no fair minded person can deny that what is generally called luck has been a material factor.

But conceding all these things, the fact remains, President Coolidge has shown qualities of true greatness. In no way more conspicuously than in his constant appreciation of his own limitations. When death placed him so suddenly and unexpectedly in the White House, he remarked to his old college friend, Dwight Morrow, "I shall not try to be a great President."

And he has never tried to be. He has never TRIED to be ANYTHING but himself. Only those who realize the pitiless spotlight that beats upon the White House, can fully appreciate how impossible it would be for a small man, a genuinely commonplace man, to remain there for any length of time, without giving himself away—without meeting disaster.

President Coolidge never gave himself away for the very simple reason he never had anything to give away. He was a man without vanity or pretensions. He knew himself, he never forgot himself. A man who never forgets himself can justly claim one of the major qualities of greatness. So once more we hark back to that time-honored phrase, "The King is dead; Long live the King!" It is Mr. Coolidge now, and President Herbert Hoover. For the first time in American history, we have an efficiency engineer for President.

As mentioned above Mr. Hoover is as different from Mr. Coolidge as black from white. Mr. Hoover has never been an office holder or a politician. Mr. Coolidge has been both. Mr. Hoover is a cosmopolitan, a man familiar with nearly every country in the civilized world. Until he was President, Mr. Coolidge had never been outside the borders of New England. Both in private life are men of few words. But Mr. Coolidge also was a man of few deeds. President Hoover is a man of many.

The most striking difference, however, is in temperament. On the American limited, as before stated, President Coolidge was the brakeman—an excellent brakeman, in fact a "great" brakeman—but a brakeman nevertheless. President Hoover is going to be the engineer. Not only the engineer, with his hand on the throttle and his eye on the track, but unless we are much mistaken, also ex-officio, the fireman, switchman, brakeman and conductor.

In other words (but as Benchley once remarked, no better ones) President Hoover is going to be PRESIDENT not only in name, but in fact. He is going to DO THINGS, new things, probably big things.

There is going to be no half-way station for this Hoover train. It is going to be a big success or a big failure. President Hoover is in our opinion, the best qualified man to enter the White House since Roosevelt. We hope and believe he will make a great success.

But as he aspires to great things so he assumes great risks. There is the matter of personal popularity for example, so necessary in this Democracy for political success. It may be merely our over-anxiety, but as we survey the situation at this auspicious time, with the Hoover market booming and the optimists so lustily singing, we can't get out of our mind the picture of Silent Cal—returning to his modest home in Northampton—saying nothing, doing little and smiling. And somehow we know just why he is smiling—because deep down he knows not only how lucky he has been, BUT HOW LUCKY HE IS TODAY.

RADIUM TREATMENT OF DISEASED TONSILS

Since we reported here the satisfactory results obtained from the treatment of enlarged and infected tonsils and adenoids with diathermy, or so-called cautery, it is diverting to note, several good conservative, not to say reactionary, doctors who at first positively assured patients inquiring about the new method that it was unsafe or inefficient or, in one instance, just one of a newspaper doctor's pipe dreams, have quipped themselves to provide this treatment for patients, and quite a lot of the more progressive brethren are now taking technical courses of instruction in the new method, preparatory to adopting it in their practices.

Since we reported here the first extensive observation of the results of the chemical obliteration method for various vices, many number of doctors have dug down into dusty old journals in their own offices, read up what's doing in medicine these days, and discovered that with just a little study even an old dog can learn new tricks, much to the gratification of a numerous group of patients who have heretofore had a kind of Hobson's choice of treatment—either a formidable operation or a lifetime of fusing with the trouble.

Dr. J. C. Scal, nose and throat specialist, reported in the 1928 meeting of the New York State Medical society on the use of radium "seeds" in the treatment of diseased tonsils. Radium "seeds," so-called, are removable platinum implants of London, a short-lived gaseous product of radium decay, which Dr. Scal finds preferable to the radium needles or glass or gold seeds containing radium emanation. "They are no larger than bird seed, at that, and strong silk thread is so attached to each implant that the seed may be removed readily, after it has been planted in the tonsil four or five days. As a rule, no local or other anesthetic is necessary—except when the gagging reflex interferes with the treatment, the whole treatment is readily carried out in the physician's office, the patient has no sore throat and no interference with eating or with occupation, and the tonsil begins to shrink in two or three weeks, and continues gradually shrinking for about six months, leaving just a small fibrous mass at the end of nine months.

In this form the radium product is incapable of causing any burning or other injurious effects, because the caustic delta rays and irritating alpha rays are eliminated and only the therapeutic gamma rays are active. "It that matters, not that the national academy of tonsil and adenoid surgeons will applaud the reference, but Dr. Scal mentioned, among the advantages of the radium treatment, that there is no post-operative hemorrhage, no aspiration pneumonia, no middle ear involvement when the radium treatment is used. This ought to give some of our eager wholesale operators, who hold forth in certain public and semi-private "clinics," and willing to make the caustic delta rays and irritating alpha rays as well as the post-operative hemorrhage, no aspiration pneumonia, no middle ear involvement when the radium treatment is used.
