

HERALD SPRING BY EXPOSITION STYLES TONIGHT

Medford Merchants Present Attractive Displays, Entertainment and Costume Features—Home Equipment Also Shown.

Heralding spring, 1929, and all that's new and lovely in style for men and women, Medford merchants will simultaneously present an exposition tonight between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock.

Style shows, musical entertainment and other attractive features are scheduled at the larger department stores where numerous costumes will be displayed for the first time this evening.

When the curtain of spring is raised at 7 o'clock, every business house in town will reveal specially decorated windows showing the latest details in every thing from dress to kitchen equipment.

There will be no buying and selling tonight. It will be the time for silent shopping to be completed later.

The first style show will take place at 7 o'clock at Russell's department store with music furnished by Alfred's Imperial orchestra.

Man's fashion review will be presented at 8 o'clock when living models will parade complete ensembles for sport and dress wear.

Beautiful prints will be especially prominent at the Cinderella Shop's exhibition this evening when fashion's flares are revealed by models carefully selected to show mildly what to wear and how to wear it.

Men's Styles, Too. At the Toggery, McPherson's and Campbell's shops the public will be invited to inspect plenty of good-looking men's outfits for sport, business hours and dress.

The Men's Shop and The Model also have smart clothes for the stronger sex.

No woman is fully clothed this season unless she wears the correct amount and design of costume jewelry, according to report from Bryphry's jewelry store where the latest word in novelty accessories will be shown tonight.

Montgomery Ward's and Burleson's will feature their dresses, coats and hats on living models.

During the course of the evening refreshments will be served to visitors at the M. M. Department store where a wide variety of styles in coats, dresses, lingerie and millinery will be on display.

Ethelwyn B. Hoffmann will present her shop and will be engaged for the first time tonight with her clever, individual ensembles in an attractive setting of black and green.

At Adrienne Steward's will be seen many of the dresses and coats shown Friday and Saturday nights at the Criterion theater. Lower priced apparel will be featured at her $10 to $25 store.

Wins Praise

The quality of her acting as the Private Secretary in "The News Parade" is winning the praise of movie fans everywhere for this lovely newcomer to the screen.

"The simple method I use in caring for my hair," says Miss Shea, "has been of great help to me in my motion picture work, where one's hair must always look its best. It's just the thing for busy girls, too, because it is so easy. Most of the girls I know in stage and picture work are taking it up as soon as they hear about it. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush every time you use it. It makes your hair so easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It's ideal for girls who are letting their hair grow. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean and comfortable. I don't shampoo half so often, now. It gives my hair such a silky, soft, lustrous appearance that all my friends comment on it."

Danderine removes the oily film from each strand of hair, restores its natural color, gives it more luster than brilliancy. It cleanses and invigorates the scalp; helps overcome dandruff. It is delightfully fragrant; isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. Waves, "set" with it, last longer. All drug stores have it, in generous 35c bottles.

men's have decorated their windows to display new merchandise for men and women.

Obituary

FULTON—Lillian Fulton, a former resident of Jacksonville passed away at a local hospital early Monday morning at the age of 24 years. Lillian Hanson was born in Maine June 12, 1894. Her parents died when she was a small child and she was later taken into the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Gallup then residing in Vermont but who now reside in Jacksonville, where Lillian was married at the age of seventeen to Thomas Fulton who was then employed by the Jacksonville Post, a newspaper formerly published in that city. After their marriage they moved to Yreka, California for a short time and returned to Jacksonville and purchased the Post and published same for a few years when they left and moved to Fort Ord, Oregon and purchased the Fort Ord Tribune.

Mrs. Fulton has been in failing health for several years. She with her two daughters, Barbara and Phyllis have been making their home in Ashland prior to Mrs. Fulton's entrance to the hospital about one month ago. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Anna Beck, in the east. Remains at the Conger Funeral Parlors where services will be held at a date to be later announced.

Wedding Bells

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Monday at high noon at the parsonage of the South Methodist church, when Rev. James E. Conder, pastor, performed the ceremony that united Roy Moreland and Audrey Brown as man and wife.

A rather unusual feature entered into the service when Rev. Conder brought the radio into play and asked KMRD to play "O, Promise Me" preceding the ceremony.

The young couple knew Rev. Conder in California and decided to come from their home in Arcata to Medford for his services. They were accompanied by Mrs. Vecta Lane and husband, Mrs. Lane is a sister of the bride. After the ceremony they immediately left for their home in Arcata, where Mr. Moreland is in business.

TASHKENT DUPLEX CITY OF ASIA HAS BUSINESS, QUAKES

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—When Tashkent recently shook for several hours, during a Central Asian earthquake, native neighbors confined to their bargains in the bazaar, and the lawgivers in the ten robes had something new to talk about, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

The traveler is reminded of Tashkent's frequent exposure to quakes, when he enters the city. Few houses are more than five or six stories high so that earthquake damage is reduced to a minimum.

Russian Quarter a Bit of Europe. Using modern real estate terms, Tashkent might be called a duplex, or semi-detached, city, continues the bulletin. "The old city—one one seems to know how old—still stands in its first while the adjoining Russian town, built since the Russians occupied Tashkent in 1866, presents a modern aspect."

Good Training Schedule. Fruit trees, grape vines, and fall blooming shrubs may be pruned at this time. If you are bothered by rabbits gnawing the bark of your trees, leave the prunings upon the ground all spring and they will probably rot them and leave along the trees and shrubs.

Spring blooming trees and shrubs should not be pruned at this time, as that would remove so much of the wood that will bloom this spring. The right time to prune any shrub is just after it is thru blooming.

But a short tram ride from the Russian quarter affords the "atmosphere" of Tashkent. The traveler regularly rides out of the modern into the ancient; from a portion of the Western world to a portion of the Eastern.

Many of the old residential streets are as brown and dreary as they were centuries ago. Brown dust covers the ground, two brown, dry mud walls rise high on each side, and brown dust fills the air. The walls from the backs of Tashkent houses and surround large courts. The street sides of the houses are blank, except for doorways at frequent intervals.

Wild Poppy Gardens Cover Roof Tops. "Now and then the upper limbs of a lofty poplar rising above the inner side of the wall give color to the drab scenery. If the traveler is fortunate he may view a flowering garden through an open gate, or he may glimpse a few poppies peeping over the corner of a housetop. The poppies grow wild on the clay roofs of Tashkent."

The bulk of Tashkent's 250,000 inhabitants are Sarts, a sturdy, tanned people famed for their love of bargaining. In the business streets and bazaars the native merchants, preceding over open-front shops, fill the air with sales talk, while their hands and arms assist, so far as talking through their fingers. Pedestrians talk in many dialects and shrill voices of vendors add to the clamor. Above the din the harsh voice of the caravan leader warns pedestrians of his approach, and as his dusty, north-easterly followers pass, the pedestrians are forced to stoop, jump and slide to avoid the freight protruding over the camel's sides or being trampled under the animals' feet. Tashkent has a railroad, but the caravan has not been displaced.

Native Costumes Add Color to Old City. "The dreary aspect of the residential streets does not apply to the inhabitants of Tashkent. The natives wear a brightly colored skull cap, around which a turban is sometimes wound, and a loose fitting coat of many colors. Green turbans identify the Mohammedan Muslims. Visiting Persians wear hats of karakul lambskin, which resembles the fur muffs once popular among American women.

A striking suit shines upon the Tashkent and travelers welcome cool tea rooms in preference to the native eat shops. While sipping tea, customers watch the itinerant barbers shave the heads of natives. With a penholderlike instrument and a little water, the hair is removed but the contours of the customer's face indicate that the operation is a necessity rather than a pleasure."
