By Asil A. Walker. GOLD HILL, Ore., Mar. 8.—(Special.) The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carter was completely destroyed by fire on Thursday afternoon about one o'clock.

The fire was discovered during the latter part of the noon hour by Verne Whitsett who saw smoke escaping from the side of the house. Mrs. Carter was preparing dinner and was entirely unaware that the house was on fire.

The fire truck used chemicals, but the wind was blowing so hard and the fire was so hot that it was ineffective in quenching the flames, as it was impossible to get close enough to the fire to really fight it.

A number of men were present to help move the things out. Among the articles saved were two rugs, an organ, and a stove.

The fire truck used chemicals, but the wind was blowing so hard and the fire was so hot that it was ineffective in quenching the flames, as it was impossible to get close enough to the fire to really fight it.

The house, which was completely destroyed, was covered by insurance. It was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Carter and was occupied by their son, Frank Carter, whose home is situated about one hundred and fifty feet from where the house burned.

Rodeo Coming to the Rialto Saturday

A typical spectacle of the old and new west; a play depicting the spirit of the locality—this is described in one word, the rodeo.

It is typically west, and yet people all over the world know or have seen the bucking bronchos, roping, steer throwing, racing and other events that marked the life of the early western country.

One of the most successful rodeos is held in Cheyenne, Wyoming, every year. The last one furnished the background for "Cheyenne," Ken Maynard's picture, coming to the Rialto theatre tomorrow.

Every event that displays daring skill and horsemanship, cattle branding, racing and other sports are graphically shown. Ken Maynard, a former circus trick rider and followed of the prize rodeos, is right at home in a picture of this type.
