CLEOPATRA USED HOT STONES FOR HER 'PERMANENT'

CHICAGO, April 3.—(AP)—Even Venus was not above bleaching her hair.

And Mohammed first introduced Henna hair dye to the ancients.

And Cleopatra had the first permanent wave by braiding her hair and placing it between hot stones.

Those peeps into the past of beauty culture were given the Chicago and Illinois Hair Dressers' association convention by Emil Rhode, president.

According to Mr. Rohde, Venus antedated Anita Loos by several centuries in the discovery that gentlemen prefer blondes, even though all the beauties of Greece had dark hair, and she acted accordingly, but because peroxide was unknown in those days, she used a substance known as "quick lime."

As for Mohammed, he invented henna hair dye, when he discovered several gray hairs in his beard, Rohde declared.

And the story about Cleopatra, he said, was vouched for by eminent Egyptologists.
