THE HOME OF BREAD LIKE MOTHER MADE

Saving Without Self-Denial.

When we plan to save our first thought is of self-denial—doing without some of the things we are accustomed to enjoying—or in other words changing our mode of living—not so however if your plan of saving involves shopping the Groceteria way.

Your saving here involves no self-denial—have what you are accustomed to having—but have it for less. Buy the same quality—in the same quantity but pay less because of the expense we have eliminated in getting your goods to you.

Clerks, credit losses and small deliveries add more than you think to the cost of what you use—yet do not affect the quality—Include Groceteria shopping in your saving plan and besides adding to your savings your leisurely inspection of our stock and acquaintance with the different foods will instead of resulting in self-denial, add much to your daily menu.
