

MOLLER NAMED EXALTED RULER OF ELKS LODGE

The new regime of the Medford Elks lodge is firmly settled in the local B. P. O. E. saddle, following the installation of the new officers last night, hence today Ben Moller is exalted ruler and the other new officers are as follows: Esteemed leading knight, C. T. Baker; esteemed loyal knight, Everett Brayton; esteemed lecturing knight, Roland Hubbard; secretary, Fletcher T. Fish; treasurer, Delroy Getchell; esquire, B. L. Lagason; chaplain, Wm. B. Hamilton; inner guard, Gene Wright; Uler, Nick Young.

Just what happened in the lodge room in addition to the installation ceremonies cannot be learned, as all the Elks today are close mouthed about it, but it is known that Leon B. Haskins was in a very much chastened mood and will be careful hereafter about setting summer styles on Easter day. What happened must have been awful as Pop Gates was seen to leave the lodge room mopping his brow with his tobacco pouch long before the meeting was over, and heard to exclaim, "I couldn't stand it any longer."

It was learned, however, that the newly installed officers did not wear tan spats, but merely spiffed the lodge members by appearing for the installation in evening dress, without showing any semblance of shame. That is, all but one of them, the outer guard, Nick Young, who only learned late in the afternoon of the new officers' decision to wear the soup and fish garb—but much too late, as he found that the others had rented the entire supply of such garments from a local second-hand store.

"I'll fix 'em," muttered Brother Nick. Hence when the much correctly dressed fellow officers-elect marched in to be installed, there was Nick Young proudly garbed in white overalls and a blue shirt. All that can be said further is that, according to report, the new officers looked very cute and fetching in their dress of black and white; that Nick saved the other lodge members from entirely collapsing at the sight, and that in spite of their indifference on this occasion to the public welfare and peace of mind the lodge will probably enjoy another very prosperous year under their guidance.

As usual, after a new regime is sworn in and installed the lodge members twice paraded around the lodge room past the new exalted ruler with a salam of obedience and allegiance, but it was noticed that many of the brothers, still muddled at the dress suit break, surreptitiously saluted with their right hand spread out and thumb to the nose.

Exalted Ruler Moller and the other officers made brief addresses in which they pledged their best efforts for the continued growth and welfare of the lodge, amid much applause. Mr. Moller, who had seen the Dug Fairgrounds musketeers affair the night before and was still impregnated with its lessons of friendship and loyalty, in his address gave the lodge a new slogan for the coming year, as follows: "One for all, and all for one, and d—d be the mosquitoes." Of course, the selfish new exalted ruler gave this out thoroughly understanding that he was the "one" meant, and therefore would get all the best of it when the "Ho La" signal of distress sounded.

Retiring Exalted Ruler Carl Tengwald was presented with a fine silver pendant from Woolworth's store by the past exalted ruler of the lodge, in token of his valiant work the past year in behalf of the lodge. Gus Newbury making the presentation speech.

Mr. Tengwald also made a brief address in which he pledged a continuation of his zeal for the welfare of the lodge. The other retiring officers included the following: Lee J. Jacobs, secretary; J. E. Walsh, treasurer; Jos. F. Fliegel, esteemed leading knight; Ralph E. Koozer, esteemed loyal knight; Kay E. Wright, esteemed lecturing knight.

For last night's installation, Past Exalted Ruler W. H. McGowan acted as grand installing officer, and the following other past exalted rulers filled the chairs as representatives of the grand lodge: Gus Newbury, leading knight; T. E. Daniels, loyal knight; Leon B. Haskins, lecturing knight; E. E. Kelly, secretary; and E. C. Jerome, esquire.

Exalted Ruler Moller reappointed Rev. Wm. B. Hamilton as chaplain, appointed Dr. H. L. Lagason as esquire, and reappointed Gene Wright as inner guard and Oscar Anderson as organist. His committee appointments will be announced at a later meeting.

The night's installation doings wound up with a concert by the Medford high school band, following which there was a good feed.
