THE SCHOOL CAFETERIA (By Virginia M. Walt)
The high school cafeteria affords many advantages for students and faculty.

It is convenient and allows adequate time for lunch. The meals are well-balanced and very economical. The cost of a whole meal never reaching over thirty (30) cents.

A day's menu consists of one or more main dishes at 6c each, a salad, 5c; filled sandwich 5c; plain sandwich 3c; dessert 5c and cocoa or milk 4c.

The food is hot and therefore more tempting than the cold lunch.

The class in cafeteria plans and prepares the day's meals, students being paid to do the monotonous work and dish washing.

Foods and Nutrition and Home Management Courses in Medford High School
We realize more and more the importance of foods and nutrition work in high school and the idea of making food study a science comparable to the other school sciences.

The planning and preparation of well balanced meals and their relation to better health are of importance in this course.

Special attention is given to proper and attractive combinations for formal and family dinners, teas, breakfasts and luncheons and an emphasis is placed upon proper table manners and etiquette on all occasions.

Parallel with this work are lessons in canning and preserving; the subjects of marketing, storage and care of food are also discussed.

The course plans dietaries based on the 100 calorie portions with calculation of calorie values of foods and certain food combinations.

Health habits and personal hygiene are of great importance and the girl is taught the value of good health in her own development and success as well as helping her family to realize good health habits.

Home management covering family relationship, budgeting, home planning and care of the house, have been a popular course this semester.

One aim is to lead the girl to think about the problems and responsibilities of home and family as good family life is the result of determined effort on the part of its members.

Another aim is to give the girl an understanding of the home as an important center of economic consumption, and to give her a sense of responsibility of the correct expenditure of her share of the family income as wise expenditures require planning.

The study of home planning with its various phases of location, size and cost is considered.

The arrangement of rooms with labor saving a chief factor and the model kitchen with its various types of equipment is a valuable study.

Developing some skill and thought will enable the girl to do better her part in the performance of her duties as a responsible member of her home and community.
