

PRELIMINARY PET SHOWS HELD FOR ENTRY IN ARMORY

From all indications the animal pet show to be held in the local armory next Saturday, April 20, will be an unusually unique display from the viewpoint of the unbiased onlooker.

An elaborate pet show was held on the Central Point high school grounds last Saturday, and among the animals entered were cats, hens, rats, dogs, guinea pigs, pigeons and turtles.

Among the winners at the Central Point preliminary were: Harvey Stevens and Letha Henselgraver, who won first and second prizes on their pet bull dogs; Velma Thomson and Helen Mercer, on small dogs; and Jack Sanderson and Ernal Shaver, who carried away first and second in the big dog department.

These winners will enter their pets in the Medford show and promise local entrants some real competition, according to the Central Point committee.

COACH TICKETS GOOD ON REGULAR TRAINS

The $15.00 coach tickets between Portland and San Francisco will be good in coaches and chair cars on all regular trains, beginning May 1st, according to J. A. Ormandy, A. P. T. M., Southern Pacific.

Heretofore tickets sold at the coach rate have been confined to the coach trains No. 7 and 8 via Cascade line. The new arrangement will have the effect of enabling passengers to use trains either via Cascade line or via the Bikeyou line, said Mr. Ormandy.

Passengers from Coos Bay points, Roseburg and the Rogue River valley, will thereby secure the benefit of coach fares, continued Mr. Ormandy.

Vilma Banky at The Rialto Today

Vilma Banky, in "The Awakening," at the Rialto, co-stars with Ronald Colman. This story of love and war in peasant Alsace also produces two other stars. Walter Byron, the young Englishman who is appearing for the first time in American pictures, as the young German cavalry officer whose love affair with Miss Banky at the little peasant girl, Marie Ducrot, furnishes the near-tragedy of the story. Lois Wolheim, as the ruthless peasant, gives another sinister, dynamic portrayal of malevolent rage.

"Marie," a new song written in tribute to Miss Banky's role in "The Awakening," is effectively used by Sterling Rothermel, the popular Rialto organist.

Coast League Yesterday

The Pacific Coast league struggle for the 1929 pennant assumed almost the character of a neck-and-neck race yesterday, when the result of three thrilling games grouped the Los Angeles Angels, the Mission Reds and the San Francisco Seals in first, second and third places respectively.

Rain at Portland caused postponement of the games scheduled for the Heavers and the Hollywood Stars. The Seals gave the fans something to write home about when they captured both games in the forenoon and afternoon, defeating the Sacramento Senators seven straight games in a week. In the morning fray, the Seals hammered Lefty Viniel for 13 hits and a 13 to 6 walkaway.

Los Angeles took both ends of a doubleheader from Oakland, 8 to 5 and 5 to 4, and strengthened its position at the head of the league thus far this season. The Angels won the week's series, 5 games out of seven.

In the ninth inning, Augie Walsh weakened, and the Oaks threatened to wipe out the lead Los Angeles established off Pete Daglia, but Russ Miller stepped into the breach with two on and none out to check the rally. Walter Berger of the Angels, John Vergez and Buzz Arlett of the Oaks, garnered home runs in the first game.

The nightcaper saw the lead shift in three successive rallies, with the Angels capturing the game in the home half of the last.
