Chopped cabbage, cucumber, raw carrots and tomatoes on romaine... and, of course, French Dressing made with Wesson Oil.

The fresh Spring vegetables lend themselves to so many interesting combinations. But the real test of the hostess is the sparkle and individuality she gets into her French Dressing.

Two parts Wesson Oil, one part lemon juice or vinegar, salt and pepper—then whatever your fancy dictates: mustard, a little sugar, a dash of Worcestershire and chopped green olives. Paprika, of course, for color... This is just a suggestion—vary it as much as you please. It ought to be definitely your own creation.

There are eighteen different kinds of French Dressing to choose from in the Wesson Oil recipe book. If you would like to have a copy of it, address the Wesson Oil and Soap-dish People, 112 Market Street, San Francisco, California.
