Postal authorities warned him against the practice, they say. Waltman then wrote his messengers on the rolls of films. Again he was warned and again, authorities believe, he did not heed. The grand jury indicated him and he was arrested yesterday by a deputy United States marshal.

TOWN HAS MONEY; PAY FOR DADS IS 25 CENTS A YEAR

HOPESTON, Ill., Apr. 26.—(AP) Let the big towns have their city hall scandals if they will; in any chronicle of Hopeston's municipal affairs there is no place for the headline: "City broke; aid sought."

Hopeston is run by 25-cent aldermen and a four-bit mayor, and begs about it. It has $29,000 in the treasury and lends it to citizens at six per cent interest. It hasn't had a saloon since 1877, which is something for even a camel to ponder.

Down here the people have an idea that bigger, boasting brothers among cities might study to advantage the way Hopeston operates. The idea of having aldermen 25 cents a year and the mayor 50 cents was incorporated in the town's charter. The village founders believed the community would be built more substantially if city fathers spent their time in working for the community good instead of worrying about paydays.

In the time that has intervened, the people have never seen fit to change the charter, even though the population has increased from 600 to 6,000.

The jobs of aldermen and mayor, despite the trivial annual emoluments, are much sought, the citizens taking a certain pride in seeing how well they may serve the city. Candidates for mayor have spent as much as $500 in their campaigns for mayor.

Donald J. McFerran, son of the town's first mayor, retired from office this week, and the council solemnly approved his bill of 50 cents for the year's mayoralty services.
