

DEBRIS OF SCHOOL IS SEARCHED

Grief Stricken Parents Fear Additional Child Victims in Ruins of Rye Cove Building — Fourteen Known Dead As Result of Storm — Scene at Disaster Is Pathetic.

RYE COVE, Va., May 3.—(AP)—Grief stricken parents searched the debris of the Rye Cove consolidated school today, fearful of finding additional victims of the tornado that yesterday claimed the lives of 13 children and one teacher in the greatest disaster ever known to this western Virginia mountain village.

Several children were reported missing early today, and because of the wide area from which the school drew its students, no complete check was possible.

Caught without warning as they were re-entering the two-story frame school house after the noon recess, some of the children were blown 100 yards and others hurled in the wreckage when the building was demolished by the storm.

Great confusion followed the tornado. Anxious fathers worked feverishly in the ruins, their anxiety intensified because many injured children had been hurriedly taken to hospitals before the parents arrived.

The body of Miss Ava Carter, a teacher, was found 75 yards from the school. The body of Holly Carter, 14, was carried 50 yards.

A. S. Noblin, principal of the school, estimated that about 155 pupils were in attendance. In addition to the eight teachers.

About 15 children, the most seriously injured, were taken in ambulances to Bristol and Kingsport, while others were sent by automobiles, trucks and wagons to the nearest railroad station at Clinchport where a train was converted into a movable hospital to take them to Bristol.

The scene on the train was pathetic; many small boys and girls suffered in silence and boys with stoical calm their broken arms and legs. Some feebly attempted to carry on conversations with their attendants, and one small girl fainted from the pain of a broken leg when placed in an ambulance. Identification tags were pinned to the children.

Because of the isolation of Rye Cove, it was more than two hours before aid could reach the stricken area over the mountain roads.

J. M. Johnson, a farmer, was standing on the mountainside when the storm struck, and watched its progress for three miles.

"The school building," Johnson said, "vanished in a moment's time. You could see it going down the valley. It ripped apart and a rain of lumber and debris began."

The Red Cross had taken over relief work today and the unit at Bristol was being reinforced from Washington and Cincinnati. Tetanus anti-toxin sent from Knoxville and nearby cities was administered to those suffering from lacerations while all available physicians and nurses at Bristol and Kingsport were called into service.

The recent installation of up-to-date steam pressure, car washing apparatus was announced today by the Hudson-Essex garage on South Riverside avenue. The new equipment is of the latest in design and includes an 18 horsepower steam engine, the generation of Jack Hueston, club professional. The junior members include sons and daughters of regular members and also high school students who recently joined the club.

It is the plan of Mr. Hueston to continue the classes during the summer months, at least for six weeks, giving instructive information for novice players.
