

NEWS of the DAY in PICTURES

QUITE A FEW IN HOLLYWOOD are wearing sunbonnets this summer. Here is Mary Brian as a little country girl.

MAYBE THIS REMINDS you of "The Sultan of Sulu." George Ade's play of twenty years ago. Anyway, it's George Ade himself, photographed at Manila recently at a fancy dress ball on the Belgenland, in which the author was making a world cruise.

WALKING UP A SHEER WALL of rock like a fly, or leaping from crag to crag with thousands of feet of empty space below them, these Rocky Mountain goats seem to have no nerves at all. A Glacier National Park ranger got this fine photograph of the species.

THE ITALIAN ROYAL AIR FORCE is one of Premier Benito Mussolini's cherished pets. Il Duce is shown decorating the standard of the corps with a silver medal at the recent seventh anniversary celebration of the founding of the force.

LADY DRUMMOND HAY, English journalist and the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean in the Graf Zeppelin, is shown here as she returned to New York the other day, wearing an odd veil from London.

TWO YEARS AGO Edith Cross of San Francisco played tennis just for fun. Now she has been paired with Helen Wills and the two are going to play together in the European and American tournaments this season.

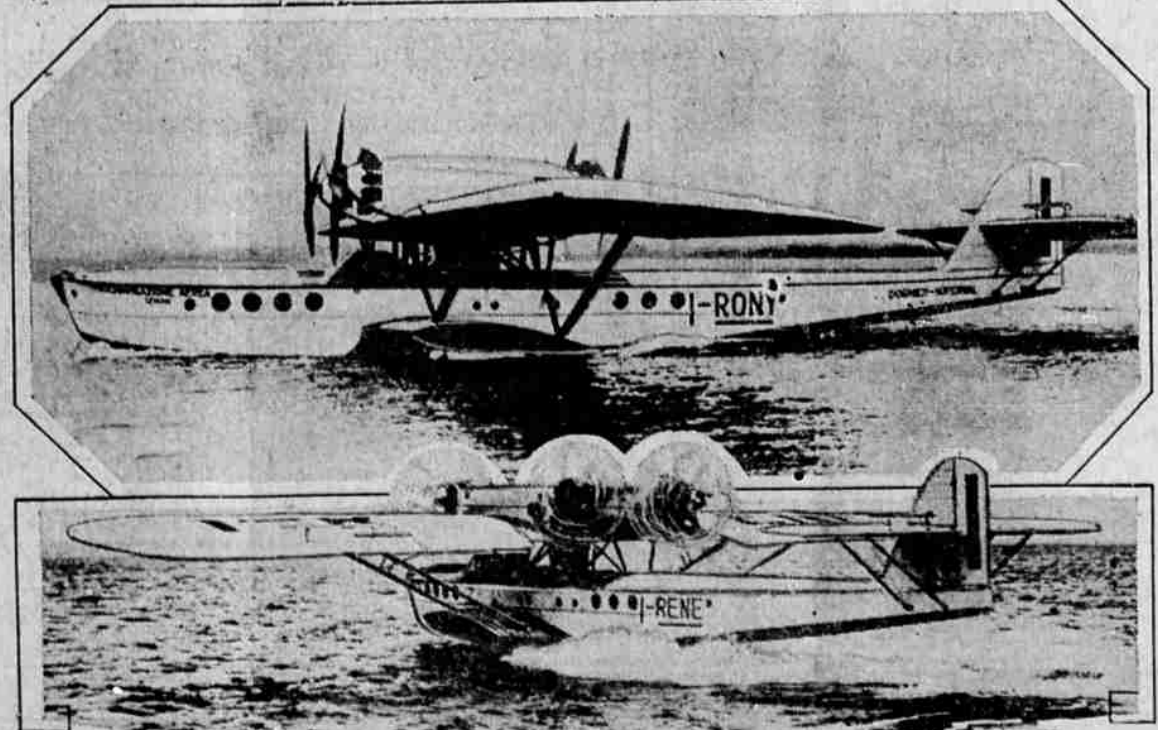

SIXTY YEARS AGO THIS WAS THE BIG EVENT in national transportation—the driving of the golden spike at Promontory, Utah, completing the first transcontinental railroad. Senator Leland Stanford of California is shown standing with the maul while another man kneels to hold the spike in position for him to drive it.

MRS. HEAVY FACE is the squaw's name, and the little girl is Stella Golden Star White Grass, petted papoose of the Glacier National Park reservation. Stella seems to have chased away Mrs. Heavy Face's frown.

IF IT ISN'T AMBITION for a man to climb 25 feet in six seconds, maybe it's pull. The young man is James Burton of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and he won the rope-climbing championship by doing just that.

TWO GIANT DORNIER SUPERWAL flying boats are shown being given their final tests in Germany before being flown over the Atlantic to be delivered to the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co. The craft will be used in the Great Lakes service.

CHIEF WHITE HORSE EAGLE, picturesque American Indian, is shown as he strolled along the streets of Paris recently. The chief likes his cigar.
