

MINING EXPERT AT BLUE LEDGE TO START WORK

A mining engineer representing the Los Angeles syndicate, holding an option for development of the Blue Ledge, arrived Friday, and left for the mine with Walter C. Robinson, formerly superintendent of the property but now the technician for the new concern.

It is understood that arrangements will be made for the immediate clearing of the mine tunnels, and a general survey made for the planned building of a flotation mill, portable sawmill, and aerial tramway. It will take five or six months to get the improvements made, and the mine in shape for operation. According to William H. Gore, it will cost in the neighborhood of $400,000, before a shovelful of copper is produced.

The Los Angeles syndicate representative will also confer with officials of the California Oregon Power company, regarding the building of a line to the mine to furnish power. It will mean the building of 15 or 20 more miles of power line.

J. B. Murphy, Jr. of Los Angeles, a member of the syndicate, and a mining engineer, is due this week to take general charge.

The force of men in charge of Erick Anderson, have about finished making the cabins at the mine habitable, and the forest service has about completed its share of the work on the road to the mine.

Neither Siskiyou or Jackson county, as yet has taken any action on putting the road in shape, as requested. Members of the local county court expect to visit the road this week, and expressed a willingness to appropriate the $1500 as requested, as soon as we know they mean business.

GOVERNOR WILL BE CANDIDATE IN 1930 VOTE

Visiting in this city the past week while en route from the Glendale celebration to Klamath Falls to address the chamber of commerce there, Governor I. L. Patterson talked a little politics, and dilated eloquently and fluently on Oregon's beautiful scenery as a whole, and of southern Oregon in particular.

Asked whether he was really a candidate for re-election, or would rather give up the reins of being the head of the state government, and retire to his attractive ranch home at Bala about five or six miles out from Salem, the governor said that it all depended on whether the voters nominated and elected him, that he enjoys the office of governor very much and hopes to be re-elected. He especially desires this re-election in order to carry out some state reforms he has in view.

"I am in good health and like the office, so why should I retire like an aged man when I feel so well and ambitious," he said, in dismissing the subject.

"What are you fellows up-state going to do with John H. Carlin?" was asked Governor Patterson, which drew the following comment from him:

"Why, the matter of John's appointment to the state tax commission is awaiting an opinion from the state attorney general as to whether he can legally go on the commission, as that new body was created by the last legislature, of which he was a member. I do not know when this opinion is coming, but probably it will be soon. Personally, I cannot see why that opinion should not hold that Carlin can legally become a member of the commission."

As to Oregon scenery, Governor Patterson said:

"The tourist travel to and through Oregon is an immense financial asset to the state. Some Oregonians wonder why it is that there is so much tourist travel from California to Oregon, and at Californians raving over our green mountains and other scenery. Why shouldn't they rave with delight over it? We Oregonians never get tired of this adoration ourselves, much as we are used to it, but to the Californians and eastern tourists coming from that state, our beautiful mountains, streams, etc., make it seem like a dreamland."

"I was struck by the large number of cars from California and other states at the Glendale celebration yesterday. There must have been 5000 people there. Why, only a few feet from the speakers' stand I saw a Florida car parked."

"The tourist travel to Oregon from all parts of the nation will
