

FLOATS FEATURE IN ODD FELLOWS PARADE MAY 22

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs grand lodge executive committee desires to call the particular attention of the public to the float features of the parade on the evening of May 22. It is desired to have a number of floats of varying character. Any other fraternal order and any business firm is invited to enter floats in the parade.

A cash prize of $25 is set aside for such best float. The only requirement is that floats entering for prize money must be on a truck or a wagon. A prize of $10 will be awarded the best decorated auto entered in the parade by any person or organization.

At all grand lodge sessions in the past in this state the parades have been held during the day; but it has been decided to try it out in Medford as an evening event.

The grand lodge session is not exclusively an affair for the welfare and edification of the members of the order who may attend. It is also designed to offer Medford and the Rogue River valley as an unusually attractive and inspiring setting.

The I. O. O. F. part of the parade is expected to have several attractive floats. Medford lodges will be excluded from the prizes. For the float best representative of the order, a prize of $25 will be awarded.

With these inducements, a very colorful column should be arranged. There will be several bands and the streets set with colored ribbons.

The line of march will begin at the public library, thence down Main street to Bartlett, down Bartlett to the Armory, which should give everyone an opportunity to witness this feature of the convention week.

APPLAUSE GREET SENIOR OFFERING OF SUB-DEB LIFE

As a diverting climax to a year of strenuous activity as one could wish, "Hub," the senior play was given the wholehearted applause of an audience which packed Hunt's Craterian last night.

The play itself, a clever adaptation from the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, was a happy choice for high school seniors, and the local cast, under the direction of Miss Isabel Willie, entered into the spirit of the theme with obvious relish.

The trials and tribulations of being a sub-deb—especially a pretty sub-deb in danger of capturing the season's honors from her more eligible sister, was the role which was given an enjoyable interpretation by Miss Elnora Hulander, eta, the debutante, who jealously guarded her privileges, was equally well handled by Miss Mildred Lawrence, while Mr. and Mrs. Archibald, parents of the two pretty daughters, were consistently well balanced in the characterizations of Alfred Stecher and Miss Elbow Mae Wilson.

Jack Walker, as the sympathetic hero, Carter Crooks; Grace Bowman the school girl chum of Hub; William Eyrum, as Eddie Perkins, the adolescent neighbor boy on the verge of puppy love; Eric Pierson as the English admirer of Lella; David Harstock as the handsome actor drawn into a make-believe love affair with the romantic Hub, filled their respective roles with ease and appreciation.

WORKERS SEEKING CONTRIBUTIONS TO HEALTH PROGRAM

Fifty cents as a contribution to public health for one year is being asked for by the Jackson County Public Health association at this time. Fifty cents is the annual dues in this organization, which conducts its membership drive the first two weeks in May. As the year's program is full of things to be accomplished to help children to be well born and live healthily ever after, funds must be raised now to cover the entire budget.

The workers who are soliciting the memberships are also the workers who sew layettes and sick room supplies, and who assist with the dental clinics and baby clinics, so the public should do its share by giving promptly and generously.

Money is needed to support the dental clinic which was started a year ago in the rooms of the health unit in the court house. This clinic gives expert service to any child whose parents are unable to pay regular dental fees.

Send dues and donations to the treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Wells, 30 Kentway, Medford, or to any of the following 10 chairmen of community health groups: Mrs. C. F. Tilton, Ashland; Mrs. L. O. Penland, Talent; Mrs. A. M. Short, Phoenix; Mrs. H. K. Hanna, Jacksonville; Mrs. E. H. Janney, Medford; Mrs. Charles Taylor, Central Point; Miss Nellie Jacobs, Gold Hill; Mrs. C. S. Davis, Eagle Point; Mrs. Verle Hoover, Rutte Falls; and Mrs. Will Grives, Prosser.

Attractive posters, describing health activities, have been made and placed in drug stores by a Medford committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. I. E. Schuler.

ASSEMBLY HEARS CAMPAIGN TALKS

An assembly was held at the high school this morning, where the candidates for officers of next year were heard in short talks.

The candidates are Edward Reames and Charles Thomas. Merits of other candidates were brought out in short and peppy talks. Because of the great interest in the worthiness of the candidates, there was insufficient time to finish the campaign talks and present the amendment which is before the student body, making the song queen a student body officer.

The discussion was continued following the noon hour, and the students were reminded that they must have a student body ticket in order to vote at the election tomorrow.

BUYING AT HOME MAY BE AIDED BY BETTER SELLING

"Better selling at home will result in the public buying at home," Perry B. Arnold of the Arnold Sales Training Institute, declared last night in speaking to an interested audience of Medford employers and employees at the first meeting of the six-day business course being conducted at the Hotel Medford.

Classes will be held at 8 o'clock p. m., May 8, 19, 14, 15 and 17. The importance of training and constant study on the part of every man and woman engaged in business or professions was stressed by Mr. Arnold, who pointed out that the day of "high-powered" salesmanship has passed.

Both Mr. Arnold and Mrs. Fay Meyer Arnold are convincing lecturers who have had extensive experience in conducting public courses for the benefit of salesmen of all kinds.

An employer considers the following points in sizing up a prospective employee, Mrs. Arnold said last night:

1. Personality, the elusive something that is responsible for 90 per cent of a sale in most cases; 2. experience; 3. health and habits; 4. age, not years but mental age; 5. character and references; 6. membership; 7. education; 8. general appearance.
