

THE STUDIO PLAYERS WILL HAVE LOCAL SUPPORT ASHLAND

The "moral support" of a number of people from their home town will follow the Studio Players, local little theater group, to Ashland tonight, where they will present "The Dover Road," clever A. A. Milne comedy, which played with such success here two weeks ago, at the Vining theater, beginning at 8:30. A number of Medford theater parties have been arranged for the Ashland performance tonight, some of them following dinner parties held both here and in the southern city.

Tickets for the show may be secured at Brown's, the Palmer Music House and Crowson's, entitling the local people to reserved seats when they reach the Ashland theater. The players and their director, Tom Swain, are enthusiastic over the appearance tonight in the neighboring theater.

SKY VOICE PLANE
HOPS FOR NORTH

Following its arrival here yesterday afternoon from Oakland, Calif., "The Voice of the Sky," cabin plane which visited Medford in the interest of Standard Etalyl gasoline, left this forenoon for Portland, giving concerts over cities while en route.

Bert McGrath, a former Broadway funster, is the announcer whose voice Medford people heard yesterday afternoon, and accompanying him on the plane were Captain J. H. Lewis Gower, pilot, former flyer for the royal air force during the World war; Bert Knapp, inventor of the amplifying apparatus sending voice and music to the earth; H. E. Wendt, mechanic for the plane.

The ship left New York City January 4 and is one of three owned and operated by the Voice of the Sky Corporation, filling advertising contracts for oil, cigarette and other companies throughout the land. The ship can be heard from an altitude of 12,000 feet and was 3000 feet high when it arrived over Medford.

This will be an innovation for the Owen-Oregon company, who have hitherto used the output of their own camps in the Butte Falls district.

John S. Owen of Eau Claire, Wis., president of the Owen-Oregon company, and William C. Owen of Pontiac, Mich., vice-president, will return tomorrow from an auto trip to the Del Norte county holdings of the Owen-Oregon company.
