The bear gets the blame from many persons for the crimes of the cougar, according to officials of the state game commission. He is not by nature a killer, and has often times been held responsible for the slaying of deer when, in fact, the animals were killed by cougars. The cougar kills a deer, takes the vital organs of the animal. The bear comes along, finds the kill and feasts upon it. Biting has been known to kill deer, but it was after they were crippled and unable to escape. Unless the bear is extremely hungry it is not his nature to attack other animals. 63*

Rogue river salmon will have a new lure to try for. A number of anglers at Weasler Inn have been having a lot of sport for the past two weeks using small spinners on fly rods. Salmon have been known to strike a fly lure, but no real efforts have been made to try fishing for them with large salmon flies.
