

POLITICS ACTUATE NOTED DRY TRIALS IN OLD MISSOURI

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Heber Nations, former Missouri labor commissioner, newspaper publisher and defendant in a bitter fought six year liquor prosecution, is to have another day—his third—in court. Twice convicted and sentenced as a beer grafter, Nations was saved a second time from prison by the United States circuit court of appeals, which reversed his conviction. A third trial is imminent. The Nations case, which caused a political furor in Missouri, involved Mrs. Mabel Willibrand, assistant attorney general, and split republican camps into factions, has been before the courts since 1923.

Nations held that a republican faction prosecuted him in order to strike at the administration of Gov. Arthur M. Hyde, now secretary of agriculture. Although prosecuted as the receiver of bribe money from an illicit beer industry in St. Louis, Nations had the support of Anti-Saloon and W. C. T. U. campaigners, who regarded him as a martyr to prohibition enforcement. When he was indicted with Charles S. Prather then state food and drug commissioner, on a federal conspiracy charge, Nations was publisher of a Jefferson City newspaper. He was labor commissioner.

Nations and Prather were accused of collecting "protection money" from the Grissledale brewery. Prather and R. B. Grissledale pleaded guilty, and testified for the government. The brewer said he had paid $10,000 for protection. Nations said he had sought to aid his brother, Gus Nations, then in charge of prohibition enforcement in the St. Louis district, and had attempted to delay the Grissledale brewery. He declared the Grissledale was being assailed by political foes including fellow dry agents. Heber further claimed that an effort was being made to put the Hyde administration in disrepute on the eve of a party convention.

Mrs. Willibrand jumped from Washington to prosecute Nations. She assailed the dry crusaders for their activities in behalf of Nations.

First convicted in May, 1925, before Judge Charles H. Farris, Nations was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment and fined $3,333. The appeals court reversed it on the grounds that Farris should have disqualified himself when asked to do so.

The second conviction, in January, 1925, was before Judge Charles Davis. Nations again was given 18 months, with a fine of $2,000. The second reversal was on the ground that the district attorney had made a prejudicial statement in his argument to the jury.

Prather and Grissledale never have been sentenced.

Farm Notes

(By U. S. Dept. of Agriculture) Naphthalene sprinkled on dried hides and skins that are to be stored in piles or shipped in bundles will help prevent damage by insects.

Best results with strawberries in Oregon are obtained by shallow cultivation from the time they start to bloom. Deep cultivation will injure the roots and decrease the yields. Finds the experiment station.

It often is necessary to camouflage the rat trap. If set on the ground it can be sunk slightly below the surface, a small piece of paper or cloth over the trigger end to prevent dirt getting under the trap, and the trap covered with fine earth or sawdust. On hard floors the trap can be buried in a shallow pan of meal, sawdust or grain.

By dividing the range into separate pastures that will carry 100 good cows and 4 thrifty, well-cared hogs, some cattlemen are getting a 90 per cent calf crop. The average calf crop on unfenced ranges, where little attention is and to culling out shy breeders among the cows, usually is considerably below 75 per cent.

It has been found that the greater difficulty of storing sorghum grains as compared with other cereal grains is due to the high percentage of cracked kernels usually found in commercial sorghum grains. At high moisture contents cracked and broken sorghum kernels respire more vigorously than do normal whole kernels.

If the "black-seal" method of plucking poultry is used, the slaughtered fowl should be plunged into water having a temperature of from 125 to 130 degrees Fahrenheit and kept there 15 to 40 seconds, depending on the class of poultry. The pin feathers should be plucked off instead of rubbed off as with sealed poultry. After plucking, the bird should be carefully dried by an electric fan or other means before packing.

Before the season's operations become extensive, it is essential that farm dehydrators be clean and in good condition. A strong solution of lye or sawdust dipped in lye and spread on the floor will remove the old prune drips which cause much mold and odor. After 24 hours the lye and juice can be removed by washing and rinsing thoroughly. Trays may be cleaned by dipping with the same solution, and mulling to create them. This kills the mold, making the dehydrator clean and sweet, says the Oregon experiment station.

Several important fall vegetable crops including late cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, Brussels sprouts and curly-kale, are started in open seed beds in late April and early May. From 2 1/2 to 3 inches of seed of these vegetables are used per acre, the seed being sown in shallow drills 14 to 18 inches apart. Transplanting to the fields takes place usually from 6 to 8 weeks following the seeding. This is best done during cool cloudy weather. These vegetables make good crops to follow early crops such as lettuce, spinach, green onions and early root crops, says the Oregon experiment station.

CLERGYMEN MUST NOT ENJOY WEED, IS EDICT

LANCASTER, Pa., May 24.—(AP)—Use of tobacco or snuff by clergymen of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ has been prohibited by the general conference of the church.

In speaking of the question, J. E. Parsons of Indianapolis, a lay delegate, severely criticized clergymen who use tobacco. "In a day when young girls sit at restaurant tables puffing at cigarettes and young men become slaves to the habit," Parsons said, "it is no time for ministers to go about doing that very thing, to which the church is strongly opposed."

Mrs. Rosewald Dead—CHICAGO, May 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Julius Rosewald, wife of U. S. multi-millionaire mail order house executive and philanthropist, died today after an extended illness.
