The Douglass motors at VICTORIA MANOR burn one particular fuel...

Mackenzie takes no chances

DRIVER MacKENZIE has quite a position. There are half a dozen cars in his care—and Victoria Manor, the Douglass' country estate, is twenty-five miles from the city. There are trips to the watering places, to the mountain resorts—a lot of driving to do.

And the Douglass family has a mechanical turn—they'd recognize the slightest motor fault. Let "the Stearns" fail to respond like it should or run unevenly and they'd notice it immediately.

So MacKenzie has made it an absolute rule that only one kind of gasoline is to be used. Not that he has to go out of his way to get it; it is a kind that is sold everywhere, but at the same time, the only kind that he feels he can trust—Shell 400.

It is now a well recognized fact that oil dilution from "wet" gasoline is one of the most serious menaces to automobile motors. Manufacturers and dealers, lubrication men and expert mechanics are constantly sending out warnings.

And today there is no need of using "wet" gasoline. Shell 400, the "dry" gas, exactly refined to eliminate heavy "wet" petroleum fractions, goes completely vaporized into your motor. No condensing droplets run down the cylinder walls. All of it goes into power and mileage—full value for your gasoline money.

Yellow and red pumps identify Shell 400, the "dry" gas. Thousands of convenient stations sell it.

Mr. Douglass, inventor of a score of improvements for phonographs, for moving picture cameras, for radios, had a fully equipped laboratory built in his home. This holder of half a hundred patents in his own right was not satisfied to quit work. Only two or three years ago his genius developed the now famous Douglass Lighter—and still he works, putting his creative mind on baffling problems of mechanics and electricity

Mr. Leon F. Douglass, one time chairman of the board of the Victor Talking Machine Co., retired some years ago and came to the Coast. His delightful home, Victoria Manor, is one of the show places of the West. Here is MacKenzie, his driver, with a Stearns-Knight eight limousine at the door of the Douglass home

Eldridge Douglass, son of the inventor, has a special hobby—motor boats. In these he has experimented with many gasolines, yet he now uses Shell 400—the very same kind that goes into Douglass automobiles

IMPORTANT — this difference!

Here is a typical example of old crankcase oil after "wet" gasoline was used. Oil 64% gasoline—ruined after a few hundred miles

Shell 400 in the same car would dilute your oil very little. Perhaps 8% or 9% in a full thousand miles—not enough to hurt its lubricant qualities

SHELL 400 The "DRY" gas

New high-compression motors have no room for the hard carbon that comes from burned motor oil. It is important that you use an oil that forms no hard carbon. Shell Motor Oil leaves only a little soft soot that blows easily away

Notice the kind of cars at Shell stations—and the people who drive them. Cars that show care—not all new or expensive makes by any means—but driven by people who are thoughtful of their automobiles, and who appreciate the sound value of Shell 400, the "dry" gas
