At the Craterian. Those movie-goers who have always thought that Clara Bow had a monopoly on that vague but real, elusive but stable thing—"It," were given a chance to re-inforce their convictions last night when they witnessed the opening performance of her first all-talking picture, "The Wild Party." There are a number of near-monopolists in the office. There are 12 of these "starkers" in the cast.

One of their number plays the role of a "busybody" and all the others have them. They dance, caper, play basketball, drive auto, bet and neck—everything in the category of the whoopee-making "hey-day" college girl.

Clara has an opportunity in this film to demonstrate her prowess as a speaking actress, and she makes every line effective.
