

CHURCH UNION PLAN ENDORSED LOCAL CLERICS

The proposed union of Protestant churches throughout the nation is regarded with interest and approval by local members of the ministerial association. The fact that there is no fundamental difference in their creeds and doctrines, and therefore only superficially separating them, is recognized by the local ministers who each represent some of an immediate union of all the protestant sects.

Rev. Carmen E. Mell, pastor of the local Christian church, and president of the ministerial association explains the situation as follows: "The plea of Christian unity has been one of the basic doctrines of the Christian church. One of the most significant and helpful movements in the history of Christianity is the present sentiment for and action toward unity. It seems to me that denominationalism and sectarianism is waning. And I am glad to be living in this day of the world which witnesses so much progress in this direction."

The desires and sentiments for church unity are crystallizing rapidly. Steps toward it are being considered and even being achieved in some instances. Smaller branches of larger denominations are getting together. Union is being restored in those church family groups themselves. The union of the larger denominations themselves is bound to come, but it will come gradually and not abruptly. It will fully answer Jesus' prayer for unity. More and more the church is carrying its vision and seeing clearly the genuine basis for this unity."

Rev. E. P. Lawrence, pastor of the local Presbyterian church told of the 12 different denominations within the Presbyterian church, which are now reorganizing their conferences and effecting a unity within their own church family. Speaking of the subsequent unity of the other large denominations with one another he said: "Each church of course has had a different history and a different background. Each, peculiarly enough, draws a different type of congregation. None of them have a monopoly on religious truth, and fundamentally all of them believe the same thing. On the strength in this union of church will be the common ground upon which all these various types of congregations will get together."

Rev. M. E. Eaton, pastor of the Baptist church outlined the tendencies of the proposed union of churches as follows: "To be less insistent upon theological dogmas and more upon practical programs; a more generous attitude toward each other in differences of opinion; a clearer analysis of doctrines and differentiation between things vital and those not vital in Christian faith and practice; recognition of the duplication of effort and activity; and the waste of time and finances, in such an overlapping. The difficulties as seen by Rev. Eaton, while numerous, may be effectively surmounted. He listed them as follows: the overcoming of the habits and prejudices of the centuries; the disposal of the great vested properties, interests and especially the trust funds of the various denominations; the difficulty of adjusting the machinery and programs of the church organizations; the loss of the stimulative effect of one church upon another; and the passion for something new, which has caused many of the disruptions in the past, and will probably manifest itself in the new organization."

Rev. James E. Conder, pastor of the Methodist Church, South, said: "The consummation of the union of churches, which seems now to be on the horizon, is very much to be desired. The differences existing between the great church bodies do not affect the essentials of Christianity. They are all basic, made differences, and adjustable. But it is a tremendous task, requiring an untold amount of patience, tolerance and perseverance. Such a union would be carrying forward the plans of the Master as tested by him while on this earth."

Rev. Raymond S. Trees, pastor of the First Methodist church, said: "I am all for church union — I would unite my family. My brother is a Presbyterian minister in New York, my sister is the wife of the pastor of the largest and most successful experiment at church union in the state of Washington — the Community church at Longview, and my mother is the widow of a Methodist minister. The fact of it is, that raised in the same Methodist parsonage each of us could easily make ourselves at home in any of the other's pulpits and churches. Church union today is mostly a matter of rearranging one's prejudices. There is not enough divisive difference in our doctrinal beliefs to keep the Presbyterian and Methodist churches apart. Differences in the form of church organization could be reconciled if there is a will to get together. We are not kept apart by form of the sacraments, there being no water baptism between us and the fact that Presbyterian ministers of the Lord's Supper in their pulpits and the Methodist kneel of a communion rail is not sufficient grounds for separation. Churches with so much common property in their beliefs and practices are going to have to answer, and increasingly so, to this modern day for the 'scandal' of maintaining separate establishments. I am tremendously encouraged over the possibilities contained in the 'union talk' of the Presbyterian Assembly, and my own general church body. The Methodists started it a year ago or so by asking the Presbyterians if we could 'keep company' with them. Now the Presbyterians are warming up to the proposition and before long we may get engaged with the topics of marriage in the near future. Why shouldn't we be one? We at least could prove the truth of the often questioned statement — that 'two can live cheaper than one,' and surely it would be a happier condition. For I honestly believe that Medford Presbyterians are just as nice as Medford Methodists and could make a wonderful go-alive together."

LOCAL YOUTH HURT IN OAKLAND NAT

The many youthful friends of Ernest (Pat) McFarland, son of Mrs. Lillian McFarland, one of the owners of the River Shop, and who has been living with his father at Oakland, Cal., while he attended high school there, will learn with regret that while in a motorboat at San Francisco recently, he in some manner, while competing with other boys in the water, broke a foot in two places.

LEGION STAG FOR MONDAY NIGHT

A big evening of fun and amusement is promised at the Legion stag party at the armory tomorrow night. The committee in charge of this special "whisper" season is working hard to make it a real success and indications point to a big time. There will be no minimum charge and every member of Medford post is urged to attend. The "post kitty" will be present and if properly persuaded may accompany some lucky Legionnaire home tomorrow night.

Spray Notice

Apples
Coddling moth eggs laid during the latter part of May will be hatching by the 2nd or 4th of June. Because of cold temperatures during the past few days no new eggs have been laid and will not be laid until the first warm evening. This means that there will be no coddling moth eggs hatching during the period of June 1 to June 13 or 14. The coddling moth spray should be on by June 12. It is well to apply this date as near as possible.

The three pounds powdered arsenate of lead per 100 gallons of spray. In wormy orchards use two pounds arsenate of lead plus one gallon of some brand of light oil per 100 gallons of spray. If possible some sprayer should be used with this oil arsenate of lead combination at a rate of one-half pound per 100 gallons. Fluic, which has been a popular brand of sprayer during the past, has been changed this year. It carries the arsenate of lead in the oil combination and should not be used. Other brands of sprayer are being shipped in and should be used.

Pears
Spray with powdered arsenate of lead, two or three pounds per 100 gallons. Spider mites are not moving onto the trees this year as early as they did last season. It is questionable if oil used in this spray will be of much benefit in controlling them. Indications are that orchards in which the spider mite is a problem will have to be sprayed with oil the last part of June either as a special spray or as a third cover spray in combination with arsenate of lead. Young scale will hardly be hatching by the time this spray should be going on. Oil will have to be used later in June to get best control of them.

COURT OF HONOR AT COURT HOUSE MONDAY EVENING

The regular meeting of the court of honor for the Medford district Boy Scouts will be held at the Jackson county court house Monday, June 3, at 8 o'clock. The board of review consists of 7 for all scouts who are to advance at the court of honor.

Special pictures of scouting activities and summer camp are to be shown at the court of honor session in connection with the program. Some special features of this nature are planned by the committee for the meetings of the court of honor each time in order to add to the interest of the program and further the aims of the scouting program. Talks on some phase of nature study or other scouting subjects are also scheduled for future meetings.

Following are some of the scouts who will appear for advancement at this court of honor: Howard Schrockenau, Joe Pierce and Eugene Moffatt, will seek advancement in the rank of second class; Howard Schrockenau, Homer Clifton, Floyd Loomis, Robert Kelley and Thomas Pasch, merit badges.

The Crater Lake Boy Scouts will serve as assistants on the board of review, taking charge of various subjects in which they are experts. They are assisted by the chairman of the board.

The increased emphasis of thorough preparation and quality in the merit badge work, which the court of honor committee is striving for, seems to serve as an added incentive for the courts of honor during the past few months have shown a large increase in advancement over those held earlier in the year.

JR. WEATHERMAN HAS A NEW CAR

No longer will Kenneth Anderson's 1929 (River district) Medford's good looks, nor with its routine affect the hearing of the public, as the minor observer of the local weather bureau traded it in to a second-hand auto dealer the other day in a deal by which he obtained a nice looking, sturdy and silently running Dodge coupe.

The deal set him back in the neighborhood of $400, and whether on account of this fact or that he is much older and wiser since he made it, he no longer sits up in his car with a tortoise look, as if expecting arrest any second, but proudly presides at the wheel of his new possession while everyone addresses him as Mr. Anderson. Before they called him any old name as he drove by, the stronger he felt.

While he now, with much regret, writes his full name on all documents as "O. Kenneth Anderson," his old driver has out on the city dump dealer and good citizen who took it in exchange quickly parked it.

Mr. Anderson will be on a rigid diet until all the payments have been made on his present car, which for years was in the possession of Mrs. John Port, and when the final payment is made will undoubtedly have dwindled from his present 225-pound weight to about 100 pounds.

OPENING OF MAGILL'S STORE BIG SUCCESS

They came, they saw and were convinced that Magill's Medford's "newness" and "old-time" store, is a credit to the city and a welcome addition to its business district.

Thousands of visitors from Medford and the surrounding valley were greeted at the new drug store yesterday by the owner, Lloyd H. Magill, of Bend, the staff of employees, including Manager R. D. Clifton, E. P. Stone and Y. A. O'Leary and a number of accommodating assistants.

When the doors were opened at 11 o'clock not a detail had been overlooked in creating an atmosphere of hospitality and attractiveness throughout the place.

Lines of baskets of flowers contributed by Medford and other business friends, were artistically arranged throughout the store and added much to the general effect. Flowers and other souvenirs were presented to each visitor, and for the children there were balloons, theater tickets and other novelties. Free samples of face powder and creams were also given to women guests.

One of the most attractive features of the new drug store is the music provided by the Columbia Kester phonograph with a loud speaker at the front of the store to furnish music for the pleasure of passersby. A large assortment of Columbia records in the recent jazz and classical numbers are on sale at the store.

All of the fixtures at Magill's are in and the entire establishment has been renovated and redecorated during the past several weeks.

Much credit for the pleasing appearance of the local Magill store is due Kenneth Crookshank of the Magill store at Bend. Mr. Crookshank has personally decorated each of the four Magill establishments.

The elegant new fountain proved popular with the numerous visitors yesterday, all of the 25 stools being occupied by buyers during the lunch hour, and before and after
