mayors. He will spend $193,000,000, which New York can easily afford, on a gigantic tube under the city, connecting the center of old New York with Brooklyn and Queens.

It will be a double-deck tunnel and toll charges will not only pay for it, but yield a profit.

Along the Canadian border prohibition isn't a drink question; it's a business question.

Border business men report that, on the American side, no business is done on Saturday; everybody is away in Canada drinking beer.

Border cigar stores complain that they might as well close up on Saturdays and Sundays.

One American tobacco concern, transferring real estate and commercial activities from the United States to the Canadian side, has recently opened nearly one hundred new stores on Canadian territory.

An English lady said, "The war has ceased to be a joke," when she couldn't get the right dog biscuit for her poodle. American business will say prohibition ceases to be a joke when they find it takes American money spenders and American real estate money to Canada.

In New York prohibition "under-cover men" issued warrants yesterday for 40 men, including owners of warehouses, truck lines, and a distinguished French nobleman, Comte Francis de Marenco de Polignac.

Under the new Jones law, these men run the risk of five years in prison and $10,000 fine.

"Under-cover men" say prohibition will work better with its new set of teeth contributed by the Jones law.

Senator Carter Glass would tax 5 per cent all stocks bought on margin and sold within 60 days.

Such buying and selling is gambling, says the senator, and "the way to discourage vice is to make it expensive."

TOP GRADE EGGS ADVANCE PENNY

PORTLAND, Ore., June 7.—(AP)—Top grade eggs were advanced one cent on the Dairy Exchange today, extras going to 27 and standards to 30. The other grades were unchanged.

Butter prices were stationary. Country dressed hogs and lambs remained firm in price, but veal prices were easier by about one cent a pound.

Poultry of all kinds was down from one to two cents a pound, because of increased receipts.

DIPLOMAS GIVEN GRADUATES

he or she stepped forward to receive the sheepskin from President Stewart of the school board. Principal Conkle, in the awarding of honors, spoke briefly. Gold Torch pins given by the Torch society, membership in which, because of the high scholastic attainments involved, is only won by 3 per cent of the high school student body, were presented to the following as rewards for the highest class honors in scholarship: Rose Currier, Helen Jones, Ver Dean Harvey, Betty Evanson, Gladys Minear, Gerald Hartsook and Donald Moore.

For their winning essays in the state chemistry contest under the auspices of the American Chemical society $20 gold pieces were presented to Helen Jones, Fern Hurbach and Beulah Cove, and a book, "Chemistry in Medicine," to Leonard Haysson.

As another outstanding achievement of a class member, Principal Conkle called attention to the fact that Miss Helen Jones won first place in the state typing contest, and will compete at the international typing contest at Toronto, Canada, next September.

The Salutary Address.

"Our Traditions," was the title of Miss Ver Dean Harvey's salutary address, which was as follows: "Commencement is one of the events that indicates the attainment of another milestone along our road of life. It is also a time for reviewing the past. While the members of this graduating class of 1929 have been associated as students of Medford high school, there have been certain worthy traditions that we have defended and kept sacred as symbols for which we believe and stand. On the athletic field, on the speaking platform, in our music, commercial and dramatic activities, we have striven to maintain a standard that would make Medford high school respected and feared in all parts of the state. We have done this not for the artificial glory attached, but because we believed that these traditions, once developed, would stay with us always.

"The time has come when we must leave Medford high school and move to other fields of endeavor. Included among us are most of the members of this year's victorious football and basketball squads, members of our debate team, journalism staff, typing and shorthand teams, leaders in girls' athletics and girls' league activities, members of our band, orchestra and glee clubs, and students who have in general been responsible for the success of our other activities.

As we step across this threshold from school life, we will take with us the traditions of Medford high school. Will we remember that it is within our power to bring greater honor to Medford high school in the future than we have in the past? The answer depends upon our ability to apply the same spirit that never admits defeat, the same conscientious and sportsmanlike conduct that has brought us success while in school, to the problems of life.

The members of this class represent the finished product of the foremost enterprise of Medford, just as the Rogue River valley is judged by the quality of its products sold in the markets of the nation, so the quality of the education afforded by this community will be judged by the achievements of the members of this and other classes. A winning football team results in valuable publicity, but the development of a superior type of citizenship in itself constitutes the most desirable form of civic improvement. The community as a whole has done its part in making possible a high school education; it is our task to practice the same willing co-operation and civic pride that is so necessary to the future growth of our city. To do this would mean to make every graduate of Medford high school stand out as a worthy addition to the community, and bring to the name of our school an admiration and respect that would be an inspiration to future graduating classes.

"Our triumphs on Van Scoyoc field, our achievements in the class rooms of Medford high school are over, but the greatest conquest of all—the winning of a place of recognition and appreciation in the community is before us. We have only to hold constantly in mind the traditions that we have helped to develop, if we would have it said of us, 'The fruits of victory fall to those who have but tried.'"

The Valedictory Address. "The Debt We Owe" was the title of Miss Rosie Currier's valedictory address, reading as follows:

"These graduation exercises mark the end of our careers as students of Medford high school. Tonight, we are assembled for the last time, and it would be appropriate for us to pause a moment and reflect on the obligations we have incurred as a result of the privileges that have been extended to us. Some of us will graduate to continue our education in colleges and universities, others to take up the task of earning a living. However, regardless of our respective courses, no matter how divergent our paths, we must remember that the community expects of us certain services in return for the education which we have been given.

"It is essential that we be aware of the sacrifices and efforts that have made our education possible, and in what coin we can repay the debt we owe. To our parents we stand indebted for the years of unselfish giving of money, time, and loving consideration. Their faith in us demands that we give the best we have to justify the privileges that have been placed within our reach. Our first obligation is to reward our parents by becoming the type of citizens that our fathers and mothers are.

"To our teachers also we owe a debt for their skillful instruction tempered with patience and understanding. At all times they have striven not only to instruct us in the various fields of knowledge, but to instill in us the principles of sterling character, and the ideals of genuine American citizenship. They have striven by word and example to teach us the value of education exists only to the extent to which it is used to make the world a better place in which to live.

"Finally, we, as graduates of the public schools, owe a debt to the community for providing the facilities for our education. As a monument to their belief in the benefits of education, the people of Medford have erected buildings, and provided the best teaching talent available. They have done more than this. They have supported all school activities with an enthusiasm and sincere interest that has stimulated the students to put forth their best efforts. Class members of the graduating class of 1929 are particularly fortunate in having attended a school that has had the hearty support of the townspeople.

"How are we to repay the debt we owe to our parents, to our teachers, and to the community? The answer is to be found in the following words of Theodore Roosevelt: 'A teacher's finest handiwork is the development of true American citizenship.' Upon us and thousands like us rests the responsibility for the future success or failure of American idealism. We must preserve a hearty respect for the laws of our country; perform the duties of citizenship in a cheerful and intelligent manner; and above all earn for ourselves a respectable and honest living.

"This is a debt that cannot be paid in a day, a week, or a year. It is not a debt that can be paid in money, but one that requires a lifetime of devotion to the highest standards of honesty and integrity. As a representative of the graduating class of 1929, and speaking in behalf of my fellow classmates, I feel that I voice the opinion of the majority when I state, in closing, that we accept our responsibility and pledge ourselves to repay in full measure the debt we owe."
